...AVING BUCKLES ... IN FIERCE HEAT

...reets of Mid-Western City Blow Up Showering Bricks in Air

CHICAGO, July 4.—Residents of northern Illinois and Indiana enjoyed a new thrill today while motoring to their various county seat celebrations this Fourth of July. The paved highways in the heat of the last ten days have become veritable roller coasters, a ride not advertised on the programs.

The Lincoln highway in the vicinity of Morrison, Ill., has been heaved into hillocks in several places, it is reported. It also buckled in two places between Rochelle and Sterling.

The cement pavement known as the Higgins road out of Elgin, Ill., also has buckled, due to the intense heat which has burned up the corn in many communities. Recent rains, however, are expected to revive the crops.

Perhaps the most interesting report of pavement buckling comes from Polo, Ill., where Mason street blew up, throwing a shower of bricks as high as second-story windows, and awakening Sunday afternoon slumbers with a noise comparable to quarry blasting.

Auto Whirls 'Round

Miss Louise Spear, driving an automobile at twenty miles an hour over the brick paving at that particular moment had her machine pitched at right angles after bounding into the air over the two-foot obstruction. Fortunately, there were but few people on the street at the time.

An entire section of the street, one-half block in length, was thrown off pitch and the wrecking crew at work believes that the expansion joints were insufficient to withstand the terrific heat. The paving was laid seven years ago in a concrete base and until this summer it had not been affected by heat.

Damage to paved streets and highways in the midwest cannot be estimated, but highway engineers advocate more expansion joints to prevent further damage.

'Drowning' Boy Didn't Go Near Water, At All

LONG BEACH, July 4.—"Don't go near the water," cautioned Mrs. Rodgers of the Seaside Auto Camp, to her twelve-year-old son as he donned a bathing suit. In a few minutes Mrs. Rodgers called the police to say that her son was drowning.

The fire department pulmotor crew and Detail Officer Joe Hale made a record run to the scene and searched After some time he was found near his home. He declared that he had followed to the letter his mother's instructions and in proof showed that his bathing suit was not wet.

PROGRAM OF FOURTH IS COMPLETE

Glendale today is celebrating the one hundred and forty-seventh anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

"Kids"—both juvenile and adult—are making the most of the occasion and the patriotic spirit, as exemplified by noise and firecrackers, is rampant throughout the community.

Picnic parties are now putting lunch boxes, well filled with appetizing victuals, into the family busses and preparing to set out for a hundred or more destinations for a nice quiet day. When they get there, they will find that about a hundred thousand other families more or less had the same idea.

Music by Band

The Glendale Elks' band under the direction of R. E. Kinney at 2:30 this afternoon in Patterson park will present a program of patriotic selections.

The municipal plunge in Patterson park will be open all day and probably until 9 o'clock tonight. Old Sol, whose rays have been warming the San Fernando Valley for several days, promises that it will be well patronized.

A baseball game on the diamond at the west end of Park avenue is expected to draw a large crowd of fans. This will be a contest called at 2:30 p. m. between the Glendale Merchants and the Glendale Athletics. "Slim" Harris and Walter Heidler will do the heaving for the Merchants. "Tommy" Morgan will pitch for the Athletics who have lost only two games so far

NEW CHURCH ATTRACTIVE BUILDING

Presbyterian Structure to Be Complete by First of November, Belief

The completion of the stone work about the two main entrances yesterday afternoon marked another chapter in the progress of the construction of the new Presbyterian church.

Three-fourths of the edifice is now completed, according to Robert Bird, superintendent of construction for Architect Robert M. Orr. He asserts that the work is right up to schedule. He added that the building will be completed by the first of November unless delay in the delivery of artificial stone delays its progress.

The Los Angeles Art Stone company recently was obliged to vacate its plant because of the opening up of a street through its property. Its stock of stone was moved to various vacant lots and deliveries are greatly delayed.

Although the stone work surrounding and ornamenting the two main entrances is now mortared in place, many tons of this artificial stone are needed to complete the two gables and the tower. Until this arrives, the progress of construction will be slow.

Plan Twelve Louvers

Brick work upon the tower now rises to a height of eighty feet. It will go fifty feet high-

Chews on Fireworks; Blows Hole in Cheek

MILLEDGVILLE, Ill., July 4.—Leo Cable, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cable of this city, was the victim of an unusual Fourth of July accident. He had his pocket full of candy and torpedoes. By mistake he put a torpedo in his mouth which exploded when he bit it. A hole was blown in his cheek requiring three stitches to close, according to the attending surgeon.

Lead Miners Rejoice Over Rich Ore Strike

GALENA, Ill., July 4.—Galena residents interested in lead mining have a right to celebrate today with a few extra blasts of rock. Two weeks ago a stockholder in the Davis property offered to trade his interest for a beefsteak dinner. The following day a large vein of ore was uncovered. A 100-pound chunk of lead is on display in the bank building here today.

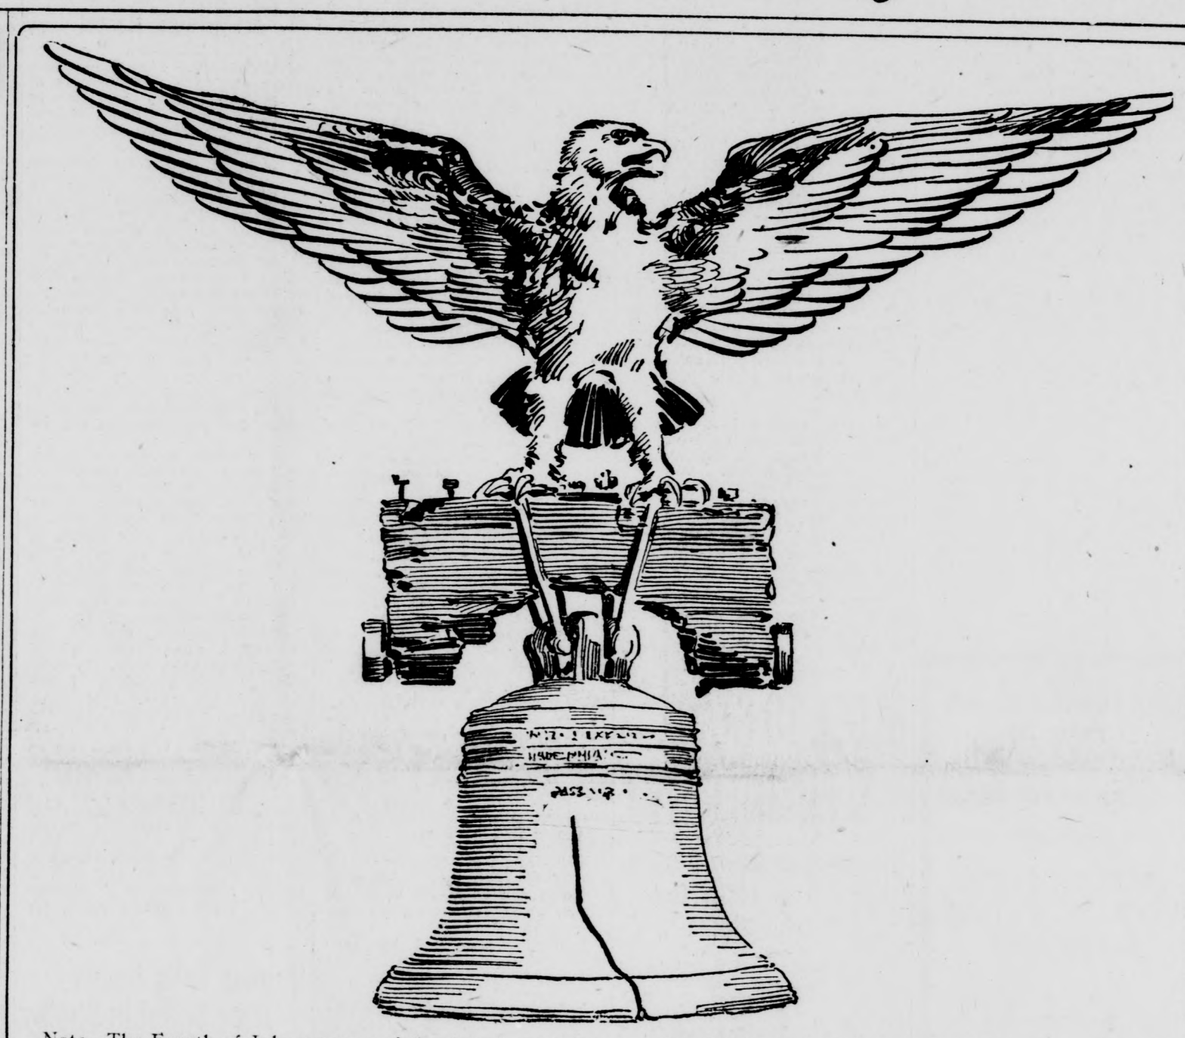
L. A. TERMINAL COMPANY SELLS FOR $2,500,000

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—The holdings of the Los Angeles Dock & Terminal company of Long Beach were sold today to the Pacific Steel company for a consideration in excess of $2,500,000. Two hundred acres are included in the deal.

CANAL BUILDER DUE IN LOS ANGELES TODAY

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—General G. W. Goethals, builder of the Panama canal, will arrive in Los Angeles today to confer with California engineers regarding the construction of the Boulder Canyon dam in Arizona. His visit will include a personal inspection of the proposed dam site.



Note—The Fourth of July message of the American Legion is a plea for the revival of patriotism in the United States. In voicing the hope of thousands of world war veterans for the preservation of the republic above all else, Alvin Owsley, national commander of the American Legion, has written the following exclusive statement for International News Service:

By ALVIN OWSLEY

Today a grateful nation pauses to observe the anniversary of an event which has meant more to the history of the world than any other crisis in the history of mankind.

With grateful hearts we recall the courage and fortitude of our forefathers, who, one hundred and forty-seven years ago, dared to declare in the face of a monarchic world that America was a land of free men who should govern themselves as their consciences dictated.

To these heroic men, the independence of our people and the establishment of democratic institutions were dearer than life or liberty. There was no thought of personal gain, no consideration of selfish interests. Love of country dominated all other emotions.

In our hurried life of this twentieth century, we are prone to forget that the power and strength of our nation are derived from the sorrow and sacrifices of few brave men many years ago. Surrounded by an atmosphere of materialism, we have yielded to a desire for selfish comfort and pleasures. The pursuit of the almighty dollar is governing more and more the lives of our people and we have come to take for granted the blessings that we enjoy only as a result of the works of those who have gone before.

There is great need for a revival of patriotism in America today. As we go about our daily tasks, indifferent to the menace that confronts us, hundreds of thousands of foreign born arrive in this country to join their comrades who have come before. Among the un-Americanized elements we find the majority of radicals and bolshevists who would tear down all that we have constructed during the one hundred and forty-seven years and leave us nothing but confusion.

The American Legion is opposed to unrestricted entrance of foreign born into this country until we have successfully Americanized those who are here now.

AERIAL STATION FOR ROCK FALLS

Illinois City Is Chosen as Stopping Place in Air Mail Service

ROCK FALLS, Ill., July 4.—This city is celebrating today the fact that it has been selected one of the principal stations on the transcontinental air mail service of the United States postoffice department.

Sixty-seven acres of land east of the city have been purchased and $7000 will be expended in improvements. Two lighthouses to guide the planes by night will be installed. These towers will rise seventy feet in the air.

A hangar, garage and an emergency plane will be maintained here, it is stated. Other fields now in operation west of Chicago are at Maywood, Ill.; Iowa City, Iowa; Omaha and North Platte, Neb.; Cheyenne, Wyo., Salt Lake City, Utah; Reno, Nev.; Sacramento and San Francisco, Calif.

Beacon lights are being built every twenty-five miles along the air mail route, providing farms in their immediate vicinity with a miniature aurora borealis, it is said.

Bananas? No, But We've Nice Oranges And Lemons

Yes, we have no bananas! But we have some nice juicy oranges, and lemons for lemonade on this Fourth of July. We have them right here in Glendale, too, if you please.

The Rossmoyne Packing plant on Glendale avenue, near Monterey road, is completing its season in the citrus fruit grown here. Two more cars of oranges are to be shipped in the next ten days or two weeks, and then Manager Lester Jones will close the plant.

All told, sixty-five carloads of oranges were shipped over the Union Pacific lines to eastern points from Glendale while eight cars of lemons have gone forward. The last of the crop is being picked. And next year the crop will probably see "finis" written for the Ross ranch is sold and now being subdivided under the name made famous by the fruit—"Rossmoyne."

Ten people have been employed as packers this past season and very favorable prices are reported by Mr. Jones. During the past thirty days lemons have become stronger on the eastern market, due to the terrific heat which has made lemonade the most popular home beverage.

Reviewing the history of citrus packing industry here, Mr. Jones states that ten years ago more than 300 carloads of fruit were shipped from Glendale annually by the three or more plants. Hundreds of people were employed.

With the development of a home city, however, inroads were made upon the big ranch holdings leaving only the Sparr and Ross packing plants operating. Last year the Sparr plant was closed when development of Sparr Heights as a residential subdivision began.

And now the Ross ranch is being sold. As soon as this project by the Haddock-Nibley Company is completed and all of the lots pass into private owners' hands there will be no need for a packing plant. The people will do their own packing, perhaps.

So, as the song goes, "Yes, we have no bananas, but we have some nice juicy oranges, and lemons for lemonade."

Railroad Workers Are Given Wage Increase

CHICAGO, July 4.—Wage increases approximating $1,607,000 annually for 28,800 employes of four southern and southeastern railroads were announced here today by the United States railroad labor board. All are effective as of June, 1923.

BANKER RECALLS DAYS IN SHELBY

Montana 'Boys' Would Not Permit Battle to Be Called Off, He Says

There is one man in Glendale vicinity who is "just achin'" to see the fight in Shelby today. For he comes from that country where everyone knows each other as a brother, out where the west begins.

C. A. Haskins, cashier of the Bank of Montrose, lived in Helena, Mont., until a few months ago. He reads every line of news from Great Falls and Shelby with the keenest relish for Jim Johnson and "Gene" Lane are his friends and he knows them like a book.

Then, too, he has slept in the Sullivan hotel in Shelby with its two floors of rooms just big enough for a bed and a stand for the bowl and pitcher. Last night each one of those rooms brought $20 for the night.

When he read in The Glendale Evening News last night that the fight was to be staged, he laconically remarked: "I knew it was coming off just as scheduled. There isn't any fooling with those Montana folks. When 'Gene'

LIVES AGAIN AS RESULT OF MODERN MEDICAL MIRACLE

Like Dream Dawning He Responds to Drug On Marble at Morgue

By GEORGE JACQUES
As Told to The Evening News

SENSATIONS of death? I had none, although the doctors told me I was dead as a doornail for 20 minutes. I had been knocked unconscious by the rescuing Japanese fishing vessel off Alamitos landing Sunday afternoon after treading water and holding two girls afloat for forty-five minutes.

When I regained consciousness after Dr. Pomeroy had injected adrenalin in my left arm, it seemed impossible for me to open my eyes. There was a pervading smell of formaldehyde. Finally I awoke from the "knockout," it seemed. My body was black. I was sick and cold.

They had me laid out on a marble slab. Like a dream dawning I realized I was in a morgue where I had seen other people. There was Mr. Jennings, father of the young people I was with.

"Why am I at the undertaker's?" I remember asking.

"It was the first place we could get to," he replied.

The doctors said a miracle had occurred.

I knew it, but I had no sensation.

My prayers had been answered.

By GIL A. COWAN

MODERN miracles have been reported to an unbelieving world, but I have just returned from a talk with the "dead." With mine own eyes I have seen George Jacques, hero of five ocean rescues, whose life was restored in a Santa Ana morgue Sunday afternoon by Dr. Pomeroy who used the powerful drug, adrenalin, 20 minutes after other physicians had pronounced the man dead!

It was he who for 45 minutes "walked on the waters," praying and urging Helen and Marguerite Jennings to walk with him o'er the boundless deep, praying and watching for some rescuing crew traversing the expanse of the Pacific ocean off Alamitos bay.

It was he who assured the sisters that their brother Wilbur was clinging to the boat, which was only too true, for his lifeless body was revealed under the little motor speedster yesterday afternoon, one foot caught in the accelerator of the engine.

It was he who held to the girls' jersey sweaters and told them to kick off their tennis shoes and to tread, tread, tread as their bodies became benumbed with cold—yet he never once lost his grip on life nor his faith in an Almighty eye over all.

And three quarters of an hour later when the Japanese fishing boat, Ishikawa, found them and nosed alongside, he handed up Helen, aged 15, to their care. Then a dull thud of the boat knocked him unconscious, the little yellow fishermen grappling with Marguerite, aged 23, and pulling her aboard, others diving for the heroic rescuer.

The Japanese made a quick turn with their human salvage to Alamitos landing, the little speedboat having drifted from their sight. The girls were suffering from exposure. Jacques was believed dead, being in an unconscious state, his body turning black.

HERO TELLS OF RESCUE AT SEA

Interview With 'Dead' Man Reveals How He Saved 5 From Drowning

Taken to Mortuary

Resuscitation failed to bring him to and he was taken to a mortuary in Santa Ana, where doctors solemnly shook their heads and declared another victim of the sea had passed beyond. But there was one doctor who refused to accept the verdict. He brought in the adrenalin and injected it into the veins of Jacques' left arm.

Again the heart of this hero began beating. A curious crowd began gathering, including the father of the other victims, W. Lucas Jennings, president of the Cabiria Steel Corporation of Pittsburg, who owns a palatial yacht and a home in Hollywood. Friends also had been summoned to take charge of the body. And outside newspaper men and motion picture operators waited.

The rudder post of the speed boat, traveling about forty-five miles an hour between San Juan Capistrano and Catalina, carrying the Jennings party and Jacques, had broken shortly after 10 o'clock Sunday morning, capsizing the little craft and throwing the girls and their rescuer almost fifty feet clear. It was 11 o'clock when they were picked up and noon when the Japanese made Alamitos landing. Jacques recovered about 2:30 in the afternoon.

Assists In Search

After dressing in the death room, he accompanied Mr. Jennings back to Long Beach, and after giving a clew as to the whereabouts of Wilbur and the boat he returned to Glendale. On Monday and Tuesday he accompanied the rescuers on their search, having his first meal last evening.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Newton McBryde, 126 North Louise street, he modestly told of his heroism, a bit nervously perhaps, but as a matter of course. It was not the first rescue he had effected. Ten years ago at Venice, where he was a life guard for three years, he saved a girl. Later he saved another woman. And only a year ago he jumped off the Lick pier at Ocean Park and saved a little lad.

Recounting that experience, he said the crowd of spectators applauded his daring dive.

"Applaud, you fools," I cried, "throw me a rope." For the child nearly clawed his eyes out and provided him a greater struggle than any he had ever experienced.

Jacques is an interior decorator by trade, having done a great deal of work in this vicinity. His mother resides in Los Angeles. At the McBryde home last evening he held an informal receptioin for friends. He is hardly able to talk, but fared much better than the Jennings girls, who are ill at their home, threatened with pneumonia.

Instead of staying in bed, however, the hero of the rescue personally directed the search of sixty hours which culminated in the finding of the Jennings boy, aged twenty-five. The father presented the finder with the boat, and the family plans to return east with their son's body for burial in Pittsburg.

Steering Post Snaps

The fatal party left Long Beach Sunday morning for a run to San Diego in the little speed craft, but on reaching San Juan Capistrano they decided to return to Catalina for lunch. About ten minutes prior to the accident they passed the Japanese fishing fleet bound for Long Beach with the morning's catch.

"Wilbur sounded the siren and I looked at my watch," said Jacques. "It was about 10 o'clock. A few minutes later the steering post snapped and the boat whirled round and round as though going into a maelstrom. The girls and I were thrown clear, it seeming to me as though I were skidding over the water.

"Taking charge of the pair who were unable to swim, I told them to kick off their shoes, which they did. We saw the boat go round and round, capsized and finally drift away. The girls kept talking of their brother's whereabouts and I assured them he must have clung to the boat as we could not see his body floating.

Believes In God

"It may seem silly, but I prayed as I had never prayed before. I attend church quite regularly and I believed that God would be good. And while I prayed I had to talk incessantly to keep the girls from giving up to the cold and the beating of the waves, which soon hammered our arms and breasts black and blue. I could not have held out much longer when the fishing boat appeared. And when I knew it was all over, I did not care what happened."

Knocked Unconscious

Science might explain Jacques' resurrection to the fact that he was knocked unconscious before drowning. Therefore no water entered his lungs. And he was mentally impervious to the shock of death, the stopping of heart action and the shock that usually proves fatal in the injection of adrenalin.

Friends here declare that Jacques is worthy of a Carnegie medal, two of them, perhaps. Certainly he deserves all of the hero worship two girls can give him, yet there is another story to be told some of these days of one who cried when she heard he had died and rejoiced last evening when she found him alive.

For his fiancee drove up in a big motorcar to take him to dinner last evening as I left the McBryde home!

M'GEE TO STAGE SLAUGHTER SALE

Glendale's Oldest Dry Goods House to Clean Out Surplus Stocks

A sensational sale is announced to begin Thursday, July 5, at McGee's Dry Goods store, 614 East Broadway, when, promptly at 9 o'clock in the morning, every yard of goods in the establishment—every sock, shirt, shoe, towel, necktie, sheet, and a thousand other articles—will be offered at prices stated by the proprietor, Robert M. McGee, to be positively smashing.

"We aren't using any halfway measures in this sale," says McGee. "We have heavy overstocks and we are going to unload, regardless of what the goods cost us. A backward season, lack of room for big new lines that are rolling in—these and other valid reasons compel such drastic measures.

Big Values Offered

"This means values to the buying public that have never before been excelled in Glendale's oldest dry goods store, which we take pride in being. In this sale I am exerting my supreme effort to move merchandise. Shrewd men and women will appreciate what this means to them in savings effected.

"But, as a special inducement, I am going to offer each of the first fifty women who come into the store tomorrow morning, July 5, a $1 percale bungalow apron for fifty-nine cents. And at 2 o'clock sharp tomorrow afternoon I am going to offer 1000 yards of Hope bleached muslin, at six yards for $1, until gone. This is twenty-five-cent muslin everywhere, a yard wide and free from dressing or filling."

Mr. McGee states that from ten to fifty per cent may be saved by customers who take advantage of this unusual sale. The H. F. Petersen company, of Portland, Ore., have been engaged to conduct the sale and have rearranged the entire store, marking every price downward. The biggest business in the history of the firm is certain, with such sensational prices and such efficient selling service.

SOCIAL EVENTS

Family Gathering

The Ervine D. York home at 1105 North Central avenue, will be the scene today of an enjoyable family gathering, celebrating the birthdays of Mr. York's brother, Everett R. York and daughter, Miss Anna York, who are members of a family group visiting at the York home.

Guests of the Yorks are Mr. and Mrs. Everett R. York and daughters, Mrs. Ivan Fawcet, Misses Helen and Anna York and daughter-in-law, Mrs. Arthur York. They are all from Tacoma, Wash., with the exception of Mrs. Fawcet, who is from Wheeling, W. Va.

They motored south from Washington and expect to spend the month of July in Southern California.

SCOUTS HAVE BIG TIME AT CAMP

Local Troops Enjoy Life On Shores of Lake Arrowhead, Resort

Glendale Boy Scouts are now having the time of their lives at Camp Royl-Kent on the shores of Lake Arrowhead. Scout Executive Harold F. Benner is authority for this statement.

"Each of the four Glendale troops have their own camps," he writes. "The campfires every evening are really the best part of the whole day. Walter Wescott, who has supervision of the campfire programs, is making a big hit with the scouts and leaders with his banjo and cornet. There are several other musical instruments in camp and we hope to have a real camp orchestra before long. Our scouts have been invited by the management of the Lake Arrowhead Company to take part in the big Fourth of July celebration which will take place at the village.

"You might not believe it, but we have a regular metropolitan newspaper in camp. It is called 'The Pine Tree Gazette.' Scout Dave Chandler of Troop No. 2 is the editor, and, believe me, he gets out some paper. Cecil Periera of Troop No. 4 was elected camp yell leader and John Toney of Troop No. 2 was made chief quartermaster.

"Sunday morning a simple and impressive non-sectarian church service was held, in which every scout in camp attended. I wish every parent in Glendale could have been here to witness the wonderful way the scouts responded to the leaders. It was an inspiration to all of us.

"At the present time there are forty-two scouts and twelve adult leaders in camp. The leaders are: Hal E. Leedom, Robert N. Taylor, H. B. Robison, William C. Wattles, W. L. Walker, Frank C. Ayars, A. G. Wheelon, Otis G. Young, Chauncey Fish, Maurice Preser, Walter Wescott and myself."

Banker Tells About Time Spent in Shelby

Lane gets through with Jack Kearns, it is Lane who is the boss.

"Jack Dempsey had to fight in Shelby today," said Mr. Haskins. "Or he would have had to fight to get out of Montana with these folks' money. They are all cowboys in that country and there's no fooling with them.

"When they decided to put on that show they would have put it on anyway, regardless of a crowd. They are the real sports when it comes to fine points. And they believe in getting a run for their money."

As Mr. Haskins talked he twirled a tiny lariat in his fingers, remembering the days when he rode the range with the very "boys" whom we read so much about in the papers.

"They know their stuff," according to Mr. Haskins, who yearns for the clattering hoofs and rigorous climate, not to mention a ringside seat at Montana's big show. Yes, he is like all of the others from the "rip roaring" land of nowhere, the place where men grow big and brawny, in the camps and towns where money means nothing and a good name everything.

And, as the banker in Montrose looks over his books this afternoon, although the establishment is closed, he is going to be a-wishing—wishing he were someplace else than Montrose, i. e., Shelby, Mont.

Mother Is Forbidden To Kiss Her Child

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—In an order by Judge Summerfield on Tuesday, a mother was forbidden to kiss her baby. A physician testified the mother, Mrs. Ina Allen, was afflicted with a serious ailement and the 2-year-old child should be protected. The mother, however, may visit the youngster, who is in the care of its father's mother, while a suit is pending between the parents.

Even in untouched soils and in animals of Northern Arctic countries, bacteria have been found.

Church Wedding

A company of 150 relatives and friends attended the wedding at high noon yesterday, Tuesday, July 3, 1923, of Miss Florence Trigg Gower, daughter of Mrs. William Gower of Central avenue, Burbank, to Heman Edgerly of Burbank. Rev. McKenzie, rector of St. Jude's Episcopal church in Los Angeles, was the officiant.

Bridal songs were sung by Miss Esther Viney, accompanied by Miss Dorothea Wood. She sang "For You" and "I Love You Truly." Miss Wood played the Lohengrin Bridal Chorus for the entrance of the bride and her attendants.

Miss Florence Le Sueur Davies of Philadelphia and Miss Katherine Viney were the bridesmaids. Miss Davies wore peach glow organdy over white satin, with hat to match. She carried an arm bouquet of lavender sweet peas. Miss Viney's gown was of blue organdy, worn with hat in a harmonizing shade. She carried pink and lavender sweet peas.

Miss Gower entered the church with her mother. Mrs. Gower wore pink georgette trimmed with silver lace. She carried a bouquet of pink and lavender sweet peas.

The bride's gown was white lace over white satin, worn with a real silk Brussells lace veil, an heirloom in the family. Her bouquet was fashioned from bride's roses, orchids, lilies of the valley and maiden hair fern.

The church was beautifully decorated in white flowers and greenery.

A reception at the Gower home followed the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgerly have gone north for a two weeks' trip and on their return will reside in Burbank, where Mr. Edgerly is in business.

Mrs. Edgerly has many friends in Glendale, where she attended and graduated from the Glendale high school in 1922.

The wedding company included relatives and friends from Philadelphia, San Antonio, Los Angeles, Glendale, Burbank, Lankershim and Pasadena.

Luncheon Hostess

Mrs. Ralph H. Dooze of 615 West Milford street, entertained at a luncheon yesterday complimenting Mr. and Mrs. Roy Doubille of Chicago, a recent bride and groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Doubille arrived here on Friday and returned to their home in Chicago last night.

The rooms were artistically decorated with a profusion of spring flowers and dainty place cards and other table appointments in the flower design were used.

Covers were laid for the guests of honor, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Doubile, Mrs. E. Fram, Mrs. Clyde St. Clair, Mrs. Henry Brandt and the hostess, Mrs. Ralph H. Doose.

Birthday Surprise

A happy surprise for Mrs. Shelby Smith on the occasion of her birthday yesterday was a luncheon at the home of Mrs. S. C. Kinch at 328 North Brand boulevard. The company included members of an informal social club of Glendale women, who meet each week at their various homes.

Yesterday shortly before noon when Mrs. Smith, who is next door neighbor to Mrs. Kinch, was invited to the Kinch home for lunch she was surprised upon arrival to find her club friends gathered for a birthday luncheon.

Red, white and blue were used in the decorations of the rooms and in the luncheon appointments. Baskets and vases of red, white and blue flowers were most effective in the living room and den, while on the dining table there was a bowl of the flowers and also a large birthday cake with the red, white and blue candles arranged in the form of a flag.

Places were marked about the table for Mrs. Smith, her mother, Mrs. Yaeger, Mrs. John Rondeau, Mrs. Louis Leibert, Mrs. Jack Hosely, Mrs. John Cole, Mrs. Kinch and her mother, Mrs. S. E. Benson.

LA CRESCENTA

NEW EPISCOPAL CHURCH PLANNED

Many Social Events to Raise Money Will Be Staged During Summer

Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Thomas were hosts at a tea party last week-end at which a fund was started for the construction of a new Episcopal church in this community. Already the corner of Rosemont and Michigan avenues has been bought on which to place the edifice for the growing congregation. Other social events are being planned for the summer months in order that sufficient funds will be on hand this fall to start building.

William Bean is among the enterprising La Crescenta residents who will improve his property with a new home. He was at the Johnson-Anawalt lumber yards in Montrose yesterday ordering his lumber.

P. E. Hatch, general manager of the Glendale & Montrose railway lines, was a visitor here on Tuesday. An extension of the present line on Pennsylvania avenue, west, will be started in the near future to serve the rapidly populating section.

Local Merchant Gets Agency for Invention

T. Kuranaga, manager of the Japan Art & Tea company, 135 South Brand, just received a contract for the sole distribution of the Vantone Deflexograph in the state of California, Hawaiian Islands and the entire Orient.

This instrument is one of the newest inventions just granted in the United States patent office to eliminate the scratch and surface noises in phonographs.

It is only a small attachment, but is the world's wonder, and from now on music lovers can enjoy almost the natural voice or sound from any machine. Nearly every household nowadays owns a phonograph. No doubt the demand will be large. Without a doubt he will get results from this undertaking. He said he would appoint agents and subagents throughout this territory. Maybe he will open a small assembling plant in Glendale.

Eighty-seven universities and colleges of the United States offer summer courses.

MONTROSE

CONTRACTOR HAS GOVERNMENT JOB

Will Erect Administration Building of Stone in Yosemite Park

Leon Bertrand, a well-known Montrose building contractor, whose artistry is displayed in many of the cobblestone houses of this vicinity, has been engaged by Architect Myron Hunt of Pasadena to accompany him to Yosemite national park next week and look over the situation before building a stone administration building.

The government has commissioned Mr. Hunt to prepare the plans for this unusual structure, which will be made from the native rocks. It is estimated that Mr. Bertrand and his assistants will have a two or three month "vacation" at the park while doing the masonry work.

This recognition is considered quite a compliment to Mr. Bertrand's ability. He has been a resident of this section for more than ten years.

Mrs. Frances Brown, the new postmaster of Montrose, has purchased the lock boxes and other office fixtures for Uncle Sam's establishment which will occupy a part of the Belanger drug store which opens Saturday, July 7. This will give business houses immediate mail service for which they now depend on rural carriers out of Glendale.

Add Fifty Dollars to Police, Firemen's Fund

The police and firemen's benefit fund was enriched by $50 yesterday afternoon through the placing to its credit of a reward of this amount through a recent action of the city council. Royle was divided between the police and sheriff's departments.

CROP EXPERIMENTS

CHURCH'S SUMMER SCHOOL NOW OPEN

Expert Instructors Manage Vacation Classes for Local Children

An enthusiastic beginning is reported by Miss Gorton, director of the Vacation School at the Central Christian church. The school opened Monday with two departments, a primary for children from 5 to 9 years, and a junior for children from 9 to 12 years.

Miss Hazel Wilder is in charge of the primary section. She is a recent graduate from the normal training department of the University of California, Southern Branch. Assisting her is Miss Alice Mercer, who has had previous experience in vacation Bible schools, Miss Ruth Cox and Miss Marjorie Current.

Directing the junior department is Mrs. Jodan, who is an experienced song leader. Assisting her is Miss Roe, talented story teller.

Miss Gorton, who is the general director of the school, is a college graduate and has had normal training at the teachers' college of the University of Missouri.

University Character Quits Bookstore Job

BERKELEY, July 4.—The student store at the University of California, famous in its early history as the rendezvous of Jack London, Frank Norris and other literary celebrities, has lost James R. Davis, the man who has managed the "co-op" for the past twenty-six years.

When Davis took over the management of the student store it was only a small book shop located in North hall. Now it is doing a quarter of a million dollars' worth of business annually and is located in the new Stephens union building.

Davis expects to go into business for himself next December. His successor has not been chosen.

ing," various angles being presented each day.

The 9 o'clock morning class is conducted by Miss Kathryn L. Jensen, R. N., whose field is "Educational Problems In Our Sanitarium Training Schools."

Other classes follow:

9:45—Mrs. Marion Bowers, R. N., of Loma Linda, "Educational Gymnastics."

10:15—Dr. Elsie Merritt, R. N., of St. Helena Sanitarium, "Elementary School Nursing."

11:15—Miss Gertrude Nichol, R. N., of Lodi Academy, "Nursing Procedure."

1:30—Dr. Belle Wood-Comstock, of Los Angeles, "Oral, Mental and Social Hygiene."

2:30—Round-table discussion or field work.

The balance of each afternoon is devoted to study exercises and recreation.

Miss Jensen feels that a lack of standardized hydrotherapy technique is one of the principal problems with which nurses have to contend, and this lack is being filled by special courses of instruction at the present institute.

"Text books give us the theory," Miss Jensen explains, "but it is difficult to formulate and classify practice. We are, however, trying to do this, and it may be that the result of this institute will contribute a text book of practice to accompany the text books of theory."

The way this is being accomplished, Miss Jensen explained, is that an hour each day is devoted to demonstrations of hydrotherapy procedures, followed by open discussion, after which committees are appointed to write up what should be a manual of standard procedure.

Crew Deserts Snip When Paid in Marks

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—On account of the wholesale desertion Tuesday of subordinate officers and crew, thirty-two men in all, the German steamship Bochum, the first of her class in the United American line came to Los Angeles harbor from Hamburg, was not able to sail later in the day.

The crew was said to have been dissatisfied with being paid in German marks.

FIGHTERS READY FOR TITLE BOUT

Promoters See Few Hopeful Signs of Being Able to Break Even

SHELBY, Mont., July 4.—"Jack Dempsey, meet Tommy Gibbons of St. Paul, contender for the world's heavyweight championship boxing title."

Referee Daugherty, who has traveled all the way from Philadelphia to be the third man in the ring, will say something like that this afternoon before a pitifully small crowd of fight fans who will have witnessed several mediocre bouts.

Then the fight will be on; that is, unless Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, has heart failure when he sees the small gate receipts. Outside of successfully spoiling the show by greater demands than were possible for Great Falls promoters to meet, Mr. Kearns talked himself out of the largert part of $100,000 yesterday.

Due to bandied negotiations of the last ten days, thousands of fight fans have failed to put in their appearance, and only trains coming from the coast, St. Paul, Salt Lake and Denver will add to the throng of 25,000 estimated to be here last night.

Fans Stand In Line

For the first time since the Dempsey-Gibbons fight was conceived months ago, fans stood in line at the local fight headquarters last night to buy tickets for the fracas. This morning the line lengthened and the great crush is confidently expected at noon.

These are the only hopeful signs the promoters have experienced, however, and a funereal countenance greets one on every hand. The correspondents are no more popular than Dempsey and Kearns, the belief being general that adverse stories, sent out on the condition of local finances, were responsible for the failure of the crowd to appear, and the promoters are sure they will have to dig deep in their jeans to meet the obligations.

By the time Kearns is paid his percentage, lumbermen and contractors are reimbursed, George H. Stanton and others receive their advances, as per agreement, the preliminary boxers will do well to collect lunch money. As for the original promoters, they are out of pocket no telling how much.

Every Place Crowded

The streets of Shelby were comparatively quiet on the eve of the fight, visitors being in the majority. According to civic officials, there are 500 cars parked in the two auto parks built to accommodate some 8,000 machines. The hotels, both of them, are filled beyond capacity. Army cots are being used to take care of the excess guests in corridors, storerooms, basements and box cars.

Anyone who had a room to himself last night paid $20, while the Great Northern railroad is caring for all of its passengers in Pullman cars which will be whisked away again this evening after the big show is over.

The town is unusually arid of celebrities for the scene of a world's championship fight, perhaps because it is farther away than most notables' pocketbooks can bring them. Charles Russell, famous painter, arrived last evening. Several Los Angeles film stars are expected in today with the rest of the gang which will see Dempsey (or will it be Gibbons?) win.

Jeffries to Referee Willard-Firpo Bout

NEW YORK, July 4.—James J. Jeffries, former heavyweight champion of the world, has been selected to referee the Jess Willard-Luis Firpo fight at Jersey City on the night of July 12.

Arrangements to have Jeffries come east to referee the big go were made by Tex Rickard, promoter of the fight. Jeffries will arrive here next Tuesday or Wednesday.

The selection of Jeffries will mean there will be two former heavyweight champions in the ring, and a third, James J. Corbett, will be the fourth man in the ring.

Woman Buys Ringside Seats for Title Bout

SHELBY, Mont., July 4.—Mrs. Ray Baker, former wife of Reginald Vanderbilt, arrived in town Tuesday to witness the Dempsey-Gibbons bout for the heavyweight championship to be held in the local arena today. She came with a party of friends in a special car and immediately arranged for the purchase of a section of ringside seats.

Mrs. Baker is the wife of the of mints under the Wilson administration.

Promise Fine Weather For Shelby Battle

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The Dempsey-Gibbons fight will be staged under ideal weather conditions, the government's official weather man predicted.

"Fair and moderate temperature" is the forecast for Shelby today where the title bout will be held.

LOCAL TEAMS IN HOLIDAY BATTLE

Merchants and Athletics to Meet on Home Grounds In Bitter Contest

Baseball fans are going to have the opportunity this afternoon of deciding which of the two Glendale nines are the best ball players, the Athletics meeting the Merchants on the latter's diamond at Park avenue and San Fernando road at 2:30 o'clock, sharp.

It is an old argument between the two organizations to be settled, according to advance dope, and nothing short of the Dempsey-Gibbons go at Shelby will attract quite so much attention, locally.

Both teams have fine records, the Merchants leading the San Fernando Valley league and the Athletics boasting of only two defeats so far this year. Manager Walt Heidler of the Merchants will share pitching honors with Slim Harris for his team while Tommy Morgan will do the honors for the Athletics. With Roy Faulkner behind the bat Manager Brice could not have a better battery, it is said.

This ball game should be attended by several thousand local fans and special arrangements are being made for their entertainment during the afternoon, it is said. It is the big Fourth of July sporting event in Glendale.

Larvae of June bugs live in the ground a year, eating roots of small plants and grass, before they appear in their beetle form.

MOGRIDGE FAILS TO HIT STRIDE

Veteran Southpaw's Illness Cripples Griffith Crew At Washington

The failure of George Mogridge, veteran southpaw, to hit even his usual stride, has been the toughest blow Clark Griffith and his Washington team have received, with the old leftie hurling fairly good ball the Senators might now be figuring in the merry battle for second place in the A. L. race or even giving the Yanks a real chase.

Illness suffered during the spring training season is given as the cause for George's failure to deliver. He has not recovered his strength enough to stand the strain, according to reports.

His showing two years ago was a surprise in view of the fact that he had won but five and lost nine games with the championship Yanks the year before. Miller Huggins traded him during the winter in the deal that made Bobby Roth a Yank.

Two big seasons with Des Moines in the Western league sent Mogridge up. He won 21 and lost 15 games for the western outfit in 1914 and the next year won 24 and lost 11. He failed to sparkle with the Yanks, however, being one of a troop of southpaws who fizzled for the Gotham team.

His busiest season with New York was in 1918 when he won 15 and lost 13 for his team.

When pinning your faith, use a safety pin.

The World Over

By Franklin B. Morse. Pacific Sports Service

In the event that Lipton should again challenge for the America's cup, as has been forecasted, there would be no race probably until 1925, as the chances are the yachtsmen would require that length of time. The details of such a contest pass the understanding of the average sports reader. First the plans of the craft have to be drawn; these are studied and revised without end. Then comes the building. Every ounce of metal and every stick of wood that goes into the ship is hand-picked and scrutinized under a microscope. One of the most intricate and vexatious of the details is the set of the rigging and the fit of the sails.

These have to be adjusted and readjusted so there is neither strain nor slack, but a perfect adjustment. Not a wrinkle or billow must appear in the sails, which are made of material that costs more per yard than the nobbiest gown material worn by any supersociety woman.

The crew has to be trained. This is a process that receives the most minute attention. Every man on the craft must become familiar with its every whim, so as to know just what to do in every emergency that may arise. The men are hand-picked as to their general knowledge, brightness, mental alertness, horse sense and a lot of other perquisites that few jobs call for. The majority of the American crews in the past have come from the New England states, and they are as fine a bunch of youngsters, both physically and mentally, as can be found anywhere from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

With all of this done, then come the real tryouts which mean everything—even to the possibility of discarding a yacht that cost a fortune, chucking it into the scrap heap and building another. While this has not yet occurred in the history of the America's cup, such, however, would be the unhesitating action in the event that a boat failed in any way to meet the necessary requirements. As a rule there are a number of craft pitted against each other for final selection. And all this takes time.

Sports Chatter

By Bill Unmack. Pacific Sports Service

"Wins Golf Championship"—that head appears nowadays practically every other day on the sports pages. Nothing better proves the fact that this sport is attaining a tremendous vogue, which, like the snowball seems to increase. There is no end to the championships a player can win—world, national, state, county, city, club and even more subdivisions in every part of these United States.

With the University of California in possession of the trophy that represents superiority in this country in intercollegiate track and field events and the University of Washington tucking the honors of the Poughkeepsie regatta under its arms, two of the most important blue ribbon championships of the country have been wrested from the Atlantic to repose on the Pacific seaboard. It also establishes the fact that championships are always becoming such in fact as well as in name when the champs from the extremes of the continent meet.

Americans are making a spectacular showing at Wimbledon on the tennis courts. It speaks well for American superiority when two Americans, Johnston and Richards, are the final ones left to struggle for the victor's laurel. While Johnston has been playing a lot of tennis there are but few critics who have been able to glean anything from it that will give them a line on what they may expect from him when he returns to this country to participate in the Davis Cup matches and other important American titular events. There are some who fear that Johnston is getting too much tennis, or will have had too much by the time he reaches home, and that it will affect his play to the extent of taking the edge off it. That this possibbility cannot be ignored is conceded, particularly in view of the fact that Johnston is not, naturally, of rugged physique.

Sport Snaps

by JACK KEENE

Presumably everybody interested in baseball has some curiosity as to what Bonesetter Reese does when he cures the sore or displaced muscles of the player. Ray French, the Brooklyn shortstop, tells quite graphically his experience in his recent trip to Youngstown. First of all an appointment had to be made, for the Bonesetter has a lot of "orders" booked ahead. That part being arranged French landed in Youngstown and made his way to the home of Reese, where he does his "operations."

Let French tell what happened thereafter.

"When I got to his home he was busy waiting on another customer and I waited with other patients in the parlor. After sitting around for about ten minutes, Reese entered the room. He had a long sheet of paper and after looking it over he asked if the Brooklyn ball player was present. I went forward and introduced myself. Then we headed for the workshop. He asked me what was the matter with me and I told him how I hurt myself.

"By this time we were in his office and he told me to sit down. I did so. He got a hold on my right arm and pressed my elbow with his knuckles. I do not know why he did this but he must have pressed the right spot as a pain shot up my arm and I even felt it in my head. I began to sweat and grit my teeth. He then pressed some on my shoulder muscles with his fingers and believe me he has plenty of strength in his fingers.

"Then the tough part of the operation followed. He is a fast worker and lost no time in getting to it. He rested one of his knees on my back, on the exact spot I had felt the pain. Then he pressed violently on some ligament with his thumb. Boy, he sure did hurt for a minute. I gritted my teeth once more and the beads of sweat dropped off my brow. I heard something in my side move as if a ligament had been put in its proper place. Then he let go. He said I was all right and could play ball tomorrow.

"I stood up, and, much to my surprise, I could raise my hand over my head without feeling any pain at all. I asked him how much and he said twenty dollars. Said it just like you would say five cents. I paid him, thanked him for his services and here I am ready to play whenever Manager Robinson says the word.

What was regarded as the first time that any institution of higher learning has conferred an honorary degree for work in physical education was the action recently at Oberlin, O., when A. A. Stagg, director of athletics at the University of Chicago, was given the honorary degree of master of arts at the Oberlin college commencement.

Coach Stagg's degree was conferred for "outstanding position in the field of sport for uplifting influence over intercollegiate athletics, and for pioneer work in physical education."

Coach Stagg was returning from New Haven, where he attended the reunion of his class, 1888, at Yale.

DOCTOR'S TABLE

Because many ills are attributed to lack of proper circulation in the upper part of the body, a New York doctor has invented a table on which a man can lie and incline himself, head downward, at any angle.

Hits Two Home Runs In Philly Contest

PHILADELPHIA, July 4.—The Giants lambasted the slants of Behan, Phillies' twirler, to a fare-you-well in the sixth inning of yesterday's game, and the Giants won handily, 4 to 2. Hubbell relieved Behan in the ninth. The visitors connected for a total of seven hits. Watson, who went the route for the league leaders, allowed eight hits.

Meusel, of the Giants, had a good day with his bludgeon, connecting twice for the circuit.

Ruth's Homer Wins Extra Inning Game

NEW YORK, July 4.—A circuit smash from Babe Ruth's bludgeon, in the final minutes of play, enabled the Yankees to capture an extra inning contest from the Senators yesterday, 2 to 1. Ruth's timely swat was made in the fifteenth inning.

Morridge, who toile throughout for the visitors, was touched for 12 safeties. Bush held the Washington outfit to eight safe blows.

Instantly Killed by Blow From Elevator

SEATTLE, July 4.—A police and coroner's investigation was being made today into the death of M. B. Domask, first class electrician on the dreadnaught New Mexico, who was instantly killed Monday night when struck by a descending elevator in the New Avon hotel.

The glass of the elevator door had been broken and Domask stuck his head through the hole to locate the elevator, which was on the floor above. Before he could see his danger the cage descended, killing him instaltly.

Bad lighting is the principal source of fatigue among workers, according to engineers who have made a survey of mechanical processes in industry.

THEATRES

THE GLENDALE

"DOWN TO THE SEA IN SHIPS" shows for the last times today at the Glendale Theatre, where it has enjoyed one of the greatest receptions given any film in months. With other topical subjects it provides an ideal holiday program. "Down to the Sea in Ships" is personally recommended by Manager William A. Howe as one of the greatest sea thrillers of its kind. The picture may be truthfully called a classic of the sea. It tells the story of the American whaling industry, the film being directed by Elmer Clifton, with all stars in the cast.

Of particular interest is the sequence of the story where a giant whale is harpooned and drags the intrepid trio in the story for miles through a shark-infested ocean, only to turn at last and fleck them into the brine when the monstrous animal dived under the boat.

The star and the whaling crew actually went through the experience described and the wonder is that cameramen lashed to rigging on other boats "shot" the scene with unerring accuracy. It is told that one camera clogged as the actors' boat was spilled and only by good fortune was the scene secured.

"Down to the Sea in Ships" is making film history, having received a four-page review in the Literary Digest about two months ago. It is the most commanding picture of the year, in Mr. Howe's opinion and everyone in Glendale should avail themselves of the holiday opportunity to see this great thriller.

Paul Carson at the organ provides an accompaniment worthy of film. The Glendale Theatre boasts of being the "coolest place in town" these warm afternoons, so matinee crowds are increasing.

Building Permits For Year To Total Ten Millions, Is Prediction Being Carried Out

GLENDALE building permits this year probably will total ten million dollars. This prediction was made several months ago by H. C. Vendewater, superintendent of the municipal building department, who feels that the record made during the previous six months substantiates this prophecy. Books for the first half of 1923 closed Saturday noon with a total of $5,168,935. Monthly totals were as follows: January, $1,024,336; February, $1,019,613; March, $1,036,475; April, $582,998; May, $573,687; and June, $900,051.

TODAY'S PROGRAM READY FOR CROWD

Local Elks Band to Play at Patterson Park; Vets Picnic at Verdugo

this season. The Merchants are now leading the San Fernando Valley league.

Spanish War Veterans and members of their families from Glendale and other communities are celebrating the day at Verdugo Park with a general reunion and picnic to which have been invited members of this organization from all parts of Southern California.

Congressman to Talk

The principal speaker of the occasion will be Congressman Phil D. Swing of El Centro, representative of Imperial Valley. His speech will be of a patriotic nature laying especial stress upon the importance of the Boulder Canyon Dam.

Other speakers at the picnic probably will be A. P. Entenza of San Francisco, national commander of the United Spanish War Veterans, and Peter Roller of Los Angeles, president of the Los Angeles County Council of Spanish War Veterans.

A number of contests have been arranged for the attention of those who are sportively inclined. These include a horseshoe pitching test for men, a nail driving contest for women, and races for the children. In the morning there will be an indoor baseball game between boys and girls and in the afternoon a regular baseball game between two teams of veterans. The evening will be devoted to dancing in the pavilion.

The local committee on arrangements consists of the following: F. C. Butler, C. M. Young, F. E. Dickson, W. H. Reeves, J. D. Fraser, W. A. Loving, Sam Warren, George T. Harness, G. L. Murphy, L. D. Pike, Frank Peters, Harry Mundy, G. L. Young, Herbert Gray, Clement Hill and G. A. Gillett.

High Spots in Program

Here are the high spots in today's program:

GLENDALE-VERDUGO PARK —Spanish War Veterans' picnic. All day entertainment with amusements for the kiddies in the morning. Picnic lunch at noon. Address in afternoon by Congressman Phil D. Swing of El Centro on "Boulder Canyon Dam Legislation," a subject vital to every former service man, as well as the southwest in general. Athletic stunts late in the afternoon, winners to be provided with merchandise from a truck load of prizes. Dancing at night.

PATTERSON AVENUE PARK —Band concert at 2:30 p. m. by the Glendale Elks' band, direction R. E. Kinney. A program of aquatic events in the municipal plunge, Community singing and speeches also will feature the day there. This is Glendale's own event in which all are invited to take part.

PARK AVENUE AND SAN FERNANDO ROAD — Glendale Merchants and Glendale Athletics, two home town teams, will cross bats at 2:30 o'clock. The Merchants are leading the San Fernando Valley league, the Athletics have lost only two games this year, so some scrap is assured. Tommy Morgan pitches for the latter with Roy Faulkner behind the bat. Slim Harris and Walter Heidler, manager, will do the heaving for the Merchants.

There will be no fireworks display here due to the danger of igniting the brush in the nearby hills, but dances and many informal social affairs are planned which will well provide for amusement lovers.

Illinois Attempts to Live Within Income

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 4.—California may be called upon to give Illinois a lesson in economy, according to state officials who are trying to abide within $206,000,000 appropriation passed by the Illinois legislature at its session. And that bill handed the taxpayers doesn't include the $100,000,000 road bond issue which ultimately will cost $200,000,000, it is estimated, if voted by the people in November, 1924.

Accused Slayer Held For Probe of Sanity

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—Snarling and whining alternately as he appeared in Judge Reeve's court yesterday to face his second trial for the "diamond murder" of Nicholas Dabelich, wealthy Oakland cafe man, J. W. Allen, alias Forest Mingle, was ordered returned to the General hospital to face a hearing before the lunacy commission. Officials said today that Allen sought to evade punishment for the "gem murder" of an Oklahoma woman by feigning insanity, but was convicted and given a life sentence. Later he was paroled.

Check Shows Drop in State's School Taxes

SACRAMENTO, July 4.—Sam H. Cohn, assistant superintendent of public instruction, announced today that a check of school taxation statistics for the past two years has disclosed that county and district school taxes throughout California have been greatly decreased through operation of Constitutional Amendment No. 16, which requires that $30 in corporation revenues shall be apportioned by the state every year for the support of each student attending the public schools.

The county contribution for elementary schools was reduced from $51.15 per pupil to $44.12, and the district tax dropped from $25.62 to $20.87.

VACATION SPORT PROGRAM STARTS

Launch Community Service Summer Schedule at Playgrounds

Vacation time is play time, and, under the auspices of the Community Service Glendale's children are to have the opportunity to participate in supervised and organized play. The opening of the three summer playgrounds Monday found 135 children of all ages on hand to start the play program off.

At the high school grounds Normal Hayhurst and Mrs. Robert Kolts are in charge. Mrs. Kolts is on the grounds from 1 to 6 p m. and she has outlined a play program of intense interest to Glendale girls. She has called a meeting Friday at 3:30 o'clock on the tennis courts to plan for games and a tennis tournament.

Monday will be the gala opening day for girls and all small children and after a live program they will all journey to the municipal swimming pool for a plunge.

Tennis Tournament

Mrs. Kolts announces that registrations are now being received for the tennis tournament for which trophies for boys and girls will be offered.

Another phase of the summer work in charge of Mrs. Kolts will be a story hour every Tuesday afternoon on the high school lawn for the smaller children.

Mr. Hayhurst is arranging a tennis tournament for men and boys. The city council voted Monday night to light the tennis courts, and Mr. Hayhurst is now listing entries for the tournament.

James McMaster, supervisor at the Central Avenue school playground, and Edward Bremer, at the Cerritos Avenue playground, are planning inter-play-ground baseball games for both boys and girls. Another feature will be a five-hole golf course at each school. Sponge balls will be used for the golf and participants can use any kind of clubs they desire.

The big bicycle parade and races for boys and giris are to take place on Saturday of this week.

Practically all taxicab calls in Europe are by persons hailing machines from the curb, in the United States 90 per cent are by telephone.

PLANS TO ERECT $10,000 BUILDING

Structure to Cover Entire Lot at Orange Street and Wilson Avenue

A permit has been issued for the erection of a $10,000 one-story brick building on the southeast corner of Orange street and Wilson avenue, according to the report of the municipal building department.

John B. Tate of 400 Oak street recently acquired this property from Dr. H. V. Brown of 500 West Colorado street, whose former home was recently moved from this site.

The new building will occupy the entire lot. It will have a frontage of 84 feet on Wilson avenue and 50 feet on Orange street. The Wilson front will be divided into four stores, several of which will be divided temporary by partitions so that their width may be varied. The one at the corner will be 24 feet in width. Only one store will front on Orange street. This will be 15 feet wide and 36 feet deep.

Ornamental brick will be used for both fronts. The foundation is being prepared for the addition of a second story in the future.

Mr. Tate, who is a Hoosier, has resided in the southwest for several years. He came from Kokomo, Indiana, to Riverside. During the year that he lived there, he visited Glendale and was well impressed. Later he moved to Phoenix, Arizona. When the decision was made to return to California, he immediately decided to make Glendale his future home. He arrived in February and did not take long to make business connections. He is now using the real estate office at 200½ West Broadway of the Burton Realty company.

The News Issues Early
Young America Lets Loose
One Road To Security
Building Roads To Last

By Gil A. Cowan

BANG! This is the Fourth of July and The Evening News is out early today to wake you up. The carrier boys are going to have their holiday by hustling around with the papers before breakfast.

The Fourth of July is, for the most part, a display of Young America's enthusiastic patriotism which culminates in his manfully marching away to war when the call comes, or supporting his government in peace.

Memorial Day, Armistice Day, Washington or Lincoln's birthdays may be impressive events, but the Fourth of July stands out like a rocket in the night sky and the one big splash of patriotic jubilation. You know, there is something about the Declaration of Independence and firecrackers and red lemonade the writer cannot disassociate in his mind.

Indeed, we nearly blew an eye out one Fourth of July morning with a "whistler," we have stood in the sun and listened to the reading of the Declaration a score and more times and we have sold and drank enough lemonade to look as sour as a Southern California citrus grower this year.

Fourth of July is a day of picnics. We intend to enjoy one someplace. Perhaps we might as well start here. For "cold lunch" we will serve several select comments from other newspapers, taking first the Pasadena Star-News' efusion on "Disrespect for Law":

"Those who wilfully disregard the laws of the land breed trouble for themselves. These things react. Those who trample upon law sooner or later come to the point where they must invoke the law for their own protection. And if the spirit of disrespect for law should grow upon the country, conditions would become such that no one's rights would be secured.

"There is only one road to security for all who aspire to be good citizens—that is, to uphold all laws. In the law lies the only hope of security for the people. Break down law, and freedom departs and despotism of the worst form—the despotism of anarchy—ensues. Against this grave menace may America be protected by the good sense and the sound principles of its people!"

If you are still reading on this holiday, the Imperial Valley Press has the following to say about "Building Roads to Endure":

"'Building perishable highways,' says a good roads advocate, 'is as shortsighteded as it would be to erect houses without roofs in the expectation that no rain will fall.'

"The analogy is not so far-fetched as it may seem. Main highways already, in every part of the country, have become primarily motor highways, and the motor traffic is growing with a steadiness and rapidity that make any estimate of its future volume impossible. The one sure thing is that the traffic over all important roads in a few years will be thick and heavy beyond any present comparison.

"The only sensible thing is to build that future traffic. It means wider pavements and deeper pavements, to keep the streams of traffic moving freely and to avoid breakage and frequent repair or renewal. And the task is not impossible, by any means. If the ancient Romans could build highways that lasted for hundreds of years with little attention, surely we can do it today in America, with our unrivalled wealth, materials and engineering skill.

"The only obstacle to permanent road-building is the penny-wise policy that insists on cheap construction, ignoring the fact that such construction will have to be duplicated over and over again, and it is far cheaper to build broadly and strongly in the first place."

Ask Heavy Bond From Alleged Pickpockets

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—The highest bond ever imposed here for vagrancy was asked of "Jack Knife" O'Keefe, 45, and George McKay, 80, known as "The Duster," when they demanded jury trials in Judge Crawford's court. They were ordered to put up $2,000 bond each. Both are accused of picking pockets.

secretary of the medical department of the Seventh Day Adventist denomination, under whose control is the Glendale Sanitarium and Hospital and under whose auspices the institute is being conducted. Dr. Truman's topic is "The Ministry of Healer to a height of 130 feet before it is finished.

One of the large louvers to be used in the tower is in place already. This is a huge framework of sugar pine containing wooden slats at an angle as ventilators. The section in place is five feet wide and about twenty feet high. Upon its top will be placed an ornamental apex about eight feet high. This will make the entire louver twenty-eight feet in height. It will weigh over 1800 pounds.

One of these large louvers will be placed on each side of the tower. On either side of it will be smaller louvers two feet wide and twenty-two feet in height. Altogether twelve louvers will be used. These are being put together in Los Angeles by the Wollman Manufacturing company.

Only about 10,000 additional bricks will be used in the tower These will be fitted in between the louvers and the ornamental stone work.

The tower clock has not been ordered but the church building committee is expected to do so in the near future. This will have four faces, one for each side of the tower. Its dial will be nine feet in diameter.

About a million bricks are being used in the entire church. This will be about 200,000 less than the original estimate. Only 35,000 bricks remain to be laid before the building is completed.

Delay in the delivery of artificial stone also makes it impossible to finish the roof although much of it is in place already. The larger part of each of the two gables will be of this ornamental stone. Over eighteen tons of it will be used in them. The stones weigh from 50 to 500 pounds apiece.

Scaffolding is now set for the plasterers who will commence in a day or two to plaster the interior of the auditorium. The brick walls are now being waterproved with minwax. This is being applied under pressure. The plastering will require several weeks at least.

Change in Interior

The ceiling will be nailed to the high rafters before the scaffolding has been taken down. This will be about twenty-six feet below the peak of the half-pitch gable roof. Many thousand feet of lumber will be required. This work will be commenced about the middle of the month.

A slight change in the interior plans provides for the extension of the balcony six feet. This will allow space for two more rows of seats each of which will accommodate twenty-five persons. This change, which was an idea of Robert Bird, will increase the capacity of the church by fifty people.

The Sunday school department to the west of the church auditorium is now almost completed. The first and second floors have been plastered. The finish lumber is now in place on the second floor. The first floor will be similarly fitted next week. The walls of the basement have been plastered. Lathing the ceiling will commence tomorrow. The work of laying the Oregon pine floors will be the last thing done. The entire Sunday school department will be ready for occupancy in about six weeks.

South Americans Are Guests at Exposition

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—Delegates from 13 Latin-American countries joined with leaders of the motion picture industry and prominent local citizens and officials in the throng that are attending the premier of the American Historical Review and Motion Picture Exposition, which for six weeks here will celebrate the centennial of the Monroe Doctrine.

More than 300 motion picture celebrities were scheduled to participate in a reception committee for welcoming the Latin-Americans.

Railroads Open War On Ticket Scalpers

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—Local railroad officials and representatives of the Chamber of Commerce today declared war on ticket scalpers following complaints that the unused portions of round trip tickets are being sold freely at cut rates.

Eastern tourists who have decided to stay in California are the greatest offenders, according to the officials.

The railroads declared that eastern lines would cease to sell round-trip excursion tickets at reduced rates if the re-sale practice continues.

BOYS, GIRLS WILL HOLD LIMELIGHT

Young Citizens of Glendale to Have Best Place On Harding's Route

Glendale's enthusiasm over the approaching visit of President Harding and his party is growing apace, as the city officials and heads of local organizations perfect their plans to make the brief stop of the nation's chief executive a success.

The suggestion that the Boy and Girl Scouts be given a place of honor on the president's route through town has met with instant approval, especially from the boys and girls themselves, who are anxious to get as close a view of the president and Mrs. Harding, whose interest in both organizations is well known through their frequent expressions of approval of the work that is being accomplished for the cultivation of the highest standards of Americanism in the growing youth of the country of both sexes.

Lots of Enthusiasm

Among the school children the occasion has also stirred an immense amount of enthusiasm, for the president's love for children is proverbial among those who know him best, and it is probable that he will stop long enough to deliver a short talk to the boys and girls who will be assembled at a strategic point to see him as he passes. The recent affair at the Washington baseball park, when the school children broke through the restraining lines of soldiers and police and bombarded President and Mrs. Harding with flowers, showed the love that exists in the hearts of Young America for the nation's head, and the spirit in which that tribute was accepted by the president and the first lady of the land was evidence of the love they bear to the youngsters.

The boys and girls of Glendale, the children whose heritage this great nation is, are to be given first place when the head of the nation comes to visit their home town, and the patriotism that the occasion will implant in their breasts will be one of their choicest possessions through the coming years.

Prepare to Send Out State Roster July 11

SEATTLE, July 4.—Resplendent in fresh paint and gleaming brass work, the transport Henderson left the navy yard at Bremerton today for Tacoma, where she will meet President Harding and take him to Alaska with his party. Manned by a complement of 19 officers and 460 men, the Henderson has been undergoing a thorough renovation and refurnishing. Every man aboard is clad in a new uniform.

President Harding will occupy the stateroom designed for the colonel of marines, with Mrs. Harding's room adjoining. The president will be waited upon constantly by a marine guard of two officers and 72 men. Thirty pieces of the United States navy band of Washington, D. C., will make the trip to provide music for the president.

Proclamation

WHEREAS, Glendale is to be honored by a visit from the President of the United States, Warren G. Harding, on Friday, August 3, 1923, and

WHEREAS, It is right and fitting that the loyal citizens of Glendale should celebrate this auspicious occasion in a proper manner,

THEREORE, I, Spencer Robinson, Mayor of the City of Glendale, California, do hereby declare and proclaim Friday, August 3, 1923, a public holiday, and request that all local stores and places of business be closed on that day, or for as long a time as may be deemed necessary to permit the people of Glendale to greet the nation's chief magistrate in a manner befitting the high rank that he occupies; and I further request that the American flag be displayed on all public buildings and private dwellings in honor of the President's visit to Glendale.

And I further extend, in my capacity as Mayor of the City of Glendale, a cordial invitation to the residents of all the neighboring cities of the San Fernando valley to be with us and participate in the welcome to the President of the United States.

GIVEN under my hand and the official seal of the City of Glendale, California, this 3rd day of July, A. D., 1923.

(SEAL) SPENCER ROBINSON, Mayor.

LISTS BUILDINGS STARTED IN JUNE

237 New Jobs Commenced Last Month, says City Officials' Report

Over 237 different building jobs were commenced last month, according to statistics compiled in the monthly report of H. C. Vandewater, superintendent of the building department. In addition, 352 plumbing permits and 283 electric permits were issued by this branch of the city administration.

The total valuation of building commenced during June was $900,051. This sum was divided as follows:

Thirteen permits for business buildings, $122,600.

One apartment building, $7850.

Three six-room duplexes, $15,000.

Four eight-room duplexes, $22,700.

One ten-room duplex, $9,000.

Two two-room bungalows, $1,600.

Twenty three-room bungalows, $26,194.

Twenty-three four-room bungalows, $49,300.

Forty-five five-room bungalows, $152,650.

Fifteen six-room bungalows, $64,350.

Three seven-room houses, $25,000.

Six eight-rooms or larger, $57,500.

Thirty-four additions, $12,200.

Thirty-one private garages, $8,960.

Sixteen miscellaneous permits, $325,147.

PUBLIC SERVICE GROWTH IS TOLD

Gas and Water Meters Are Installed to Meet City's Demands

Glendale has not stopped growing by any means, according to the records of the public service department at the city hall.

James F. McIntyre, commercial agent for the public service department, admits that last month showed the usual splendid growth.

About a hundred water meters were taken over from the F. P. Newport Water Company and added to the local water system. In addition, 104 new meters were installed.

Altogether 204 more meters are being served now than a month ago. This number increases the total number of water meters in service to 8,303.

About 196 electric meters were installed last month, increasing the total in use to 10,469. Only 177 new light meters were installed during June, 1922.

During the last fiscal year, which ended at noon Saturday, 1,487 water meters were installed and 2,213 light meters were connected. The combined average is approximately 300 a month.

Gold Tooth Fillings Are County Problem

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—What to do with a quantity of pure gold was a problem which today perplexed County Treasurer John N. Hunt. The gold represents tooth fillings and crowns, removed from ashes of 350 persons, whose remains were cremated at the county general hospital since August, 1922.

Under a ruling of the county counsel, it is not permissible to offer the gold for sale. The heap of minute nuggest represents several ounces of the precious metal.

RECENT FOURTHS SHOW CONTRASTS

Independence Days of Past Seven Years Compared From News Files

There is no more interesting way of reviewing the nation's history than in recalling the events occurring near or on national holidays of recent years.

Look back perhaps for a period of seven years. Glancing into the files of The Glendale Evening News of July 3, one finds Glendalians anticipating the celebration of the Fourth with an afternoon program at the Third street playground, with Dr. E. H. Willisford as one of the principal speakers. The premonition of the world war was expressed in the headlines, "United States Can Call 21,000,000 Men", "Desperate Fighting Around Verdun", French Continue Sweep to the Somme".

One year from that date, while the home folks were marking the great national holiday with patriotic observances the headlines declare "American Battalions in Paris", "Sink and Capture Submarines", "New Armies to be Well Fed, Government to Train Gigantic Army of Cooks Before Sixteen Cantonments Open", "Create National Intelligence Service, Work of All Secret Service Organizations Combined to Hunt for German Spies".

Germany's Big Drive

And on July 4, 1918, four months before the great strife was ended with the signing of the Armistice, Glendale and other American cities did not have feature celebrations, for headlines brought news from the front that "Germans Attack American Positions", "French Press Forward".

The time of rejoicing came in 1919, when the Fourth of July was a great national jubilee welcoming home most of the American soldiers. The Glendale Evening News of July 5, 1919, added to the jubilation with the news that "Kaiser to be Tried in London, Others, 'Who Committed Appalling Infamies' also to be Tried, Lloyd-George Tells Commons".

Back to Normalcy was carried out July 4, 1920, when Glendale celebrated "an old-fashioned" Independence day with a get-together at the municipal playground at Magnolia school on San Fernando road. An added interest was voiced in the headlines, "Cox Democratic Nominee for President", "McAdoo Relieved."

Then have followed the Fourth of 1921, and 1922, with their patriotic enthusiasm and celebrations and today we are observing July 4, 1923, when Glendalians will participate in one of the biggest and liveliest celebrations in the city's history.

FINES ONLY FOR MOTOR SPEEDERS

Judge Lowe Will Not Sentence Offenders to County Jail

Glendale is a city of Freedom, we'll say! No one in the jurisdiction of the police court here will celebrate the Fourth of July in jail, according to Judge F. H. Lowe.

It is not because he has had no opportunity of sentencing people to observe Independence day behind the bars, but in view of Los Angeles county jail conditions he will not be a party to "polluting them with livestock," as he tersely tells it.

"No doubt we could do much to curb speeding here by giving jail sentences, yet if there is no moral turpitude involved I cannot see my way clear to send any clean American citizen to a place befouled by the lowest elements of humanity," said the judge. He has interviewed several residents of this city who were sentenced in Los Angeles, and as long as it is possible to collect fines he will not impose upon morally and physically clean people the impositions found in the county jail.

Will Jail Some

There is a class of speeders, however, for whom the judge has no leniency. They are the ones who give officers false addresses and fail to report for trial. Some of the most reckless speeders make it a point to disappear and bench warrants are returned with the notation, "No such address."

About fifty warrants are on the judge's desk today and he proposes to institute a drive to locate those who are "hiding out." And when these defendants are caught they may expect to go to jail. Others who are responsive to the efforts of the officers to enforce traffic regulations may thank their stars they are living in the Land of Freedom.

Brush Catches Fire As Crackers Explode

Premature Fourth of July fireworks were enjoyed yesterday by residents of the Glendale Heights tract when the brush in the hills south of Glendale caught fire. Both the Los Angeles and Glendale fire trucks responded, the location of the flames being in the 1400 block on South Adams street, part of which is in the sister city.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL IS OPEN

Enrollment Will Reach 200 Before Course Ends, It Is Predicted

The large enrollment of students for the Vacation Bible School of the Glendale Presbyterian church which opened on Monday morning at 9 o'clock proves that Glendalians realize education comprises one of the biggest assets of Glendale's growth and recognition as the fastest growing city of its size in the United States.

More than seventy students enrolled on the opening day and it is expected before the course ends this month, there will be at least an enrollment of between 150 and 200.

Rev. Louis Tinning, assistant pastor of the Presbyterian church, is general superintendent of the school, assisted by Miss Mary MacDonald of Los Angeles, as principal. Miss MacDonald is a graduate of the Bible Institute of Los Angeles and has proved a very capable young woman for this line of work. Although she has never had an opportunity before of organizing a summer Bible school she has done considerable Sunday school work which has enabled her to thoroughly understand children.

The school consists of three departments, including kindergarten, primary and junior. The school is open and free for all children of any church or no church, from the ages of 5 to 15 years. The school is only in session during the morning.

The following are the heads of their respective departments: Miss Mary MacDonald, principal and in charge of the primary department; Miss Marjorie Smith, in charge of the junior girls; Miss Martha Eilers, who is in charge of the kindergarten departments, assisted by Miss Louise Daugherty and Miss Bessie M. Field in charge of the junior boys' work. Mrs. C. M. L. Nelson and Mrs. Fannie Marple Retts will have charge of all instruction in singing during the last three weeks of the course.

Each morning a patriotic drill is carried out including the salute to the American flag, and the church flag and the singing of "America" or "The Star Spangled Banner."

Habit And Health

Each morning a calisthenics drill is given to promote strength and gracefulness and habit and health talks are given daily. During the day interesting craft work is presented in a most attractive manner. On Monday each student made a clever little paper hat upon which were pasted in bright colored paper cut-outs, "D. V. B. S."

A Bible story is told each day in an interesting manner by the heads of the various departments. Bible lessons are taken from the book, "The Child and His Wonder World."

The memorizing of five of the "grand old hymns" of the church are given particular attention and music and singing are to be given considerable time under the special direction of Mrs. Fannie Marple Retts and Mrs. C. M. L. Nelson.

It is hoped that a little later on, out-door games and sports will be taken up systematically under a competent leader.

GRANDMOTHER IS AWARDED DEGREE

Wins Honors in College While Teaching in Schools of Dallas

Dr. Margaret M. York of 1005 North Central avenue is extremely proud of Mrs. Clemence M. Simpson of Dallas, Texas, who recently received recognition as a grandmother to be awarded a college diploma and degree. A Dallas, Texas, paper says of the event:

"Of all the 124 diplomas awarded at the eighth annual commencement exercises this month at Southern Methodist University, there is small doubt that the one given Mrs. Clemence M. Simpson represents the greatest achievement.

"Mrs. Simpson, who lives at 1012 East Sixth street, is the widowed mother of eight children, a grandmother, an active, working teacher in one of the Dallas public schools, and at the same time that she became a bachelor or arts at Southern Methodist University one of her sons received his degree in engineering at Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College.

"Not only has Mrs. Simpson the distinction of being the only grandmother to be graduated at Southern Methodist University, but she is the only student of this year's class who has been at the university since its founding in 1915. During the last eight years Mrs. Simpson has worked on her degree in the few hours of leisure left from her duties in the James Stephen Hogg school."

Mrs. Simpson is a niece of Dr. York.

Once It Took Days For News To Become Known, Now It's Known In Flash

By GIL A. COWAN

HOW different news travels in this day and age as compared with the darkest hours of the American revolution following which the Declaration of Independence was signed by the thirteen colonies—a month away from their mother country. In this hour of electrical achievement the radio flashes to the four corners of the earth the happenings of the instant. The telegraph carries the burden of messages over land and under ocean. And the telephone connects anyone, anywhere, any time in these great United States of ours.

Columns could be written of the achievements by the American Telephone & Telegraph system of which the Glendale office of the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph company is a part, yet that story is but a chapter in the history of progress made by the United States in the 142 years following the close of the revolution.

"The war is over" became the cry in October 23, 142 years ago, yet it took four days for official word of Cornwallis' surrender to reach the Continental congress, says the New York Sun. Think of it! Four days for news to travel a few hundred miles, when today it travels around the globe in as few hours.

Quick Action

Four minutes from the time promoters of the world's championship heavyweight prize fight at Shelby, Mont., had found it impossible to raise the last $100,000 the report of their action was in type in The Glendale Evening News office via International News Service leased wire. Such is the wonder of the twentieth century!

However, the same spirit of interest that marked the signing of the armistice in 1918, flashed across the sea instanter on November 11, was apparent in the day of Washington's victory. There were no motor cars backfiring in one continuous Fourth of July fashion, dragging old wash boilers through the streets, such as the writer saw in Harrisburg, Pa., that memorable night marking the close of the world war, but there were—well, the New York Sun's story describes the close of the fight for freedom as follows:

End In Sight

The ending of the long struggle for independence was in sight after the hostile army had been driven from New Jersey at the battle of Springfield, June 23, 1780. The war, for the most part, was transferred to the southern states, though the British retained control of Manhattan Island.

Cornwallis believed in 1781 that if the south could be subjugated, especially Virginia, the war would be won. Lafayette, with his army, was being pushed northward from the Carolinas by the British. Cornwallis finally made his way into the peninsula between the York and James rivers, where he established a base of supplies at Yorktown.

Lafayette was about twenty miles away and in constant touch with Washington, who was wait-

DIVINITY SHAPES LOVE OF BEAUTY

Artist Praises Glendale's Cultural Activity in Sunday Lecture

William J. McCloskey, portrait painter of renown, told the Glendale Art association members, at Tuesday afternoon's meeting, in the juvenile room of the Public Library, that there is a divinity in each of us, constantly trying to express the beautiful, and that the fewer human needs or possessions we have, the better equipped we are to get in harmony with this divine urge from within and let it direct us to the goal of our chosen profession.

The artist told of "that personality differentiating one person from another," and congratulated this city on being enough advanced along cultural lines to have such a splendid club as the Glendale Art association, to separate out and foster such differentiation of personality. The organization was laying a splendid foundation for fine art achievement, he told the members and friends present.

President Entertains

Saturday, June 30, a reception was tendered the members of the Glendale Art association by their president, Mrs. Roy A. Ballagh, at her home, 202 West Doran street, over fifty members and guests being entertained.

The following artists contributed to a splendid program: H. S. Robinson, singer at the new Methodist church of Los Angeles, bass solos; K. A. Lewis, "the Hawaiian singer," several tenor solos; Mr. and Mrs. McBade, recently from Philadelphia, soprano solos and violin numbers by Mrs. McBade, accompanied on the piano by her husband, and Mrs. Russell, talented actress, who appeared with George Arliss in "Disraeli," a group of dramatic readings.

Among those present were William J. McCloskey, K. L. Lillani, John W. Cotton, Mrs. Henry Armstrong, Mrs. H. S. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. E. Franquiet, Mrs Laura Sweet, Mrs. Berry and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cheever.

LODGE OFFICERS TAKE POSITIONS

Rebekahs Hold Ceremonies Last Night; Made Gifts to Retiring Heads

Following formal installation last night in the Odd Fellows' hall on West Broadway, Mrs. Evelyn Hall has assumed the duties of noble grand of the Carnation Rebekah lodge, to succeed Mrs. Loretta Schwitters.

Over 130 members and guests participated in the lodge meeting and banquet last night honoring the retiring and newly-elected officers and a group of special guests.

Mrs. Rozella Strother, district deputy president, directed the installation. She was assisted by Mrs. Elizabeth Brandt, deputy grand secretary; Mrs. Winnie Hartley, deputy grand treasurer; Mrs. Lydia La Force, deputy grand inside guardian; Mrs. Klamm, deputy grand outside guardian; Mrs. Anna Dean, deputy grand warden; Miss Bernice Keiser, musician; Mrs. S. A. Andersen, deputy grand chaplain; Daniel Hall, installation captain; Mrs. Loretta Schwitters, district deputy grand marshal. The team of guards included Mesdames Evelyn Hall, Marjorie Pease, Anna Esterly, Tronsier, Alfred Baynes, Albert Hurd, Molly Cleland and Miss Vinona Keiser.

Miss Marjorie Pease was installed as vice grand and Mrs. Anna Dean as recording secretary.

Others Installed

Appointive officers installed were Miss Vinona Keiser, warden; Miss Angeline Quackenbush, conductor; Mrs. Elizabeth Brandt, chaplain; Mrs. Rozella Strother, right supporter of the noble grand; Mrs. Madge Hoffman, left supporter of the noble grand; Mrs. Laura Walcott, right supporter of the vice grand; Mrs. Clarence Mahaffie, left supporter of the vice grand; Mrs. Mollie Cleland, inside guardian; Henry Stephens, outside guardian.

Mrs. Mabel Goodfellow, financial secretary, and Mrs. Winnie Hartley, treasurer, serve for twelve months so were not installed.

Presented With Jewel

At the close of the installation Mrs. Hall assumed her duties. During the closing of the meeting Mrs. Loretta Schwitters, who has served as noble grand most devotedly and efficiently, was presented with the past noble grand's jewel and with another gift in expression of the appreciation and love of her lodge friends.

A banquet followed the meeting. Special guests were members of the Eastgate Rebekah lodge of Los Angeles, and several past district deputy presidents.

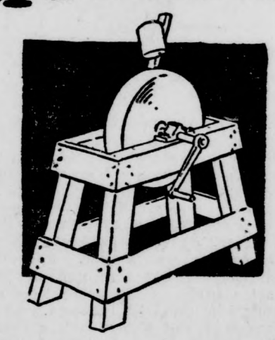
How long would a Suit of Clothes last on a Grindstone?



ALL day long the clothes we wear are subjected to the grinding action of particles of grit and dust which gather in the fabric—

There is just one way of stopping this grinding—to wash away this dust and grit.

That is what dry cleaning does; grease, soil, dirt—all the little enemies which constantly attack our garments—are carried away during the process of cleaning—

Do you wonder that clothes which are dry-cleaned regularly not only look much better, but wear longer? Resolve today to give your clothes this benefit; simply phone, and we will call.

TODAY—California's Car Problem; Conditions Better This Year. TOMORROW—Premiers Baldwin and Poincare; the Peril to the Entente, by David M. Church, London correspondent.

By ELLIS H. MARTIN
For International News Service

SAN FRANCISCO, July 4.—Will there be another car shortage.

This question is beginning to agitate the minds of California fruit producers as the time draws nearer for marketing their crops.

Annually the problem arises. Last year it was heightened by the shopmen's strike, which came when the shipping season was at its height.

Opinions differ this year as to whether a real car shortage will exist. Seth Mann, traffic expert of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, believes there will be. He is leading a movement to have an investigation made by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The commission has already arranged to investigate the situation in the northwest, scheduling hearings for both Idaho and Washington.

On the other hand, W. J. Hanford, examiner for the service department of the State Railroad Commission, after an exhaustive investigation believes the California carriers will be in a much better position to handle the heavy movement of fruits and other products requiring refrigeration from California points to eastern destinations in 1923 than they were last year. He found that a total of 46,000 refrigerator cars have been provided by the California carriers for movement of the perishable products.

Admittedly the crux of the problem is the co-operation of the eastern carriers in returning promptly the empty refrigerator cars. It is to this end that Mann seeks the co-operation of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The commission under the law is in position to direct the prompt return of these cars, and Mann is anxious to have the commission fully informed as to the problem faced by the California shippers and railroads.

Here are the high lights of Hanford's report on the situation:

"The refrigerator car supply is at present in good volume, there being approximately 2,500 to 3,000 more cars available for service now on the lines of California carriers than existed at this same period of last year, and the movement westbound is daily accumulating more of this character of equipment which will be available to care for the seasonal business when it increases in volume.

"Conditions at Roseville, which is the assembling and icing station for the Ogden Gateway, are materially better than they were last year, new sidetracks having been added and some enlargements having been made to the icing plant at such point. In addition, the Southern Pacific is at present constructing some twelve miles of double track over the Sierra Nevada mountains which will be completed and placed in service in the month of July; also double tracking is in progress in Nevada, and this double tracking, particularly as regards that in progress over the mountains—the most difficult operating point on the entire route—will materially facilitate the handling of through trains on ice, fruit and similar perishable commodities.

"The condition of motive power, both on western and eastern lines, shows more serviceable locomotives as of April 1, 1923, than at any time since the commencement of records by the car service division of the American Railway Association, which began in August, 1920. Locomotives in need of repair are decreasing materiallly, and the clearing up of the large accumulation of locomotive repairs, brought about by the shopmen's strike, has advanced to a point where normal conditions may be said to exist with some catching up on the average condition as existing during the spring months of each year.

"Notwithstanding the very heavy traffic movement now existing—approximately twenty per cent more revenue freight moving during the month of March, 1923, as against the corresponding month of 1922, and with approximately the same percentage as against March, 1921—the general movement of freight is being promptly handled and without delay."

"LEANING" THE MIXTURE FOR SUMMER SERVICE
Now Is The Time to Save Gas

Quite likely, when the cold weather came on last fall, you had so much trouble from the slow warming up of your engine and the consequent long delay in securing full power and prompt pick-up and were so annoyed by back fires, that you changed the adjustment or called upon the service man to do so, in order to eliminate these annoyances. If so, the change of adjustment was, of course, such as to increase the amount of gasoline delivered by the carburetor in proportion to the air admitted—opening of the needle valve to increase the area of the gasoline passage being the most usual change. You had to do this because the fuel, the air and the engine itself were cold a great deal of the time. Cold gasoline flows less freely than warm, cold air takes up, as combustible vapor, less of the gasoline than warm air and a cold engine gives little assistance in vaporizing the fuel. You had the carburetor set to be rather lavish of gasoline, so that a sufficiently rich mixture would be insured, even though considerable of the fuel passed through the engine unvaporized and unburned and was lost and you acepted the resulting low gasoline economy as an inevitable penalty for living in a cold climate. If you did make this adjustment of the carburetor toward the rich side, do not neglect to make the opposite change as soon as warm weather comes on, for then there will be no occasion for feeding any substantial excess of gasoline and consequently putting up with low fuel economy rapid carbon accumulation and excessive heating. The car should be taken, when the engine is well warmed—as it will run most of the time for the next five or six months—and the carburetor adjusted to furnish just as lean a mixture as will insure reasonably good power and acceleration. By doing this promptly, as soon as temperature conditions warrant, an improvement in fuel economy can be secured which will go a long way toward offsetting the wasteful operation that is hardly to be avoided during cold weather. The foregoing applies especially to cars which have inadequate means for keeping the circulating water hot and insufficient "hot spotting" or other means for heating the mixture, as the owners of such cars are more likely to be driven to enrich the carburetor adjustment for winter service than those who drive cars with more ample heat conserving arrangements.

REMOVING ENGINE VALVES

W. G. asks: Will you please tell me the different methods for removing the valves and cages from a ——— engine? I have complied with instructions given by this manufacturer, but am unable to get the valves out for grinding.

Answer: We feel sure that the directions given in the instruction book that accompanies this motor are as complete and as clear as anything that we can give you by letter. The only suggestion which we can make is that you take your car to the service station, or to some repair shop, and have the work of removing the valves and the grinding of them done in your presence. You would learn in a practical way the required procedure better than you could from any amount of written instruction, and would thereafter be able to perform this operation very efficiently.

GOING DOWN HILL

G. J. S. writes: I am told that the proper way to take a car down a hill is to place it in second gear, or even in first speed if the grade is very steep. Close the throttle and shut off the ignition switch. By doing this the car is caused to run quite slowly, and at the bottom of the hill it is only necessary to turn on the ignition. Is this good practice?

Answer: We consider it the best practice. On a slight grade it is not necessary to shift from high gear at all, as the retardation due to the engine will be sufficient, but on steeper grades, and very steep ones, the change to second or low gear is desirable in order to give sufficient retarding effect, and to reduce the duty required of the brakes. If the engine is very closely throttled you will find no practical advantages in shutting off the ignition, and will obviate the possibility of muffler explosions that sometimes occur when the engine is turned on without firing its charges.

Uncle Wiggily Bedtime Stories

— By Howard R. Garis —

UNCLE WIGGILY'S ROCKING CHAIR

"Will you come to the woods with us, Uncle Wiggily?" asked Johnnie and Billie Bushytail the squirrel boys, one day.

"Come to the woods with you? What for? Are you going camping or to play Indians?" asked the rabbit gentleman.

"We are going to make bows and arrows and play Indians," chattered Billie.

"Then I had better go with you to see that you come to no harm," remarked Uncle Wiggily, and soon he and the squirred brothers were on their way to the green forest.

"Oh, here is a tree branch that will make me a fine bow to shoot arrows!" called Johnnie after scampering about in the dried leaves.

The rabbit gentleman looked at what Johnnie had picked up. It was a long, curved branch, like the right-hand side of the letter D. But when Uncle Wiggily had looked at it and had tried to bend it, Mr. Longears said:

"That branch is too heavy for an Indian bow, Johnnie. It does not spring and bend enough. I'll get you one that is better." So the rabbit gentleman did, keeping the heavier piece of wood for himself.

"What are you going to do with it?" asked Johnnie.

"Oh, it may come in useful," answered Uncle Wiggily. "Though it is curved and bent I can use it for a rheumatism cane," and he walked along on it. Soon Billie found a tree branch that he thought would make him a good Indian bow. But Uncle Wiggily said:

"It is like the one Johnnie found—too curved and heavy for a bow, but I'll get you another," and he did, the rabbit gentleman keeping Billie's first stick for himself, as he had kept Johnnie's.

When the squirrel boys had their Indian bows and Indian arrows and were having a good time playing under the trees, Uncle Wiggily hopped along with the two tree branches bent in the shape of the right-hand side of the letter D.

"What good are they, Uncle Wiggily?" chattered Johnnie, as, with his bow and arrow, he pretended to shoot a bear.

"Why, I think I may make something of these when I get home to my hollow stump bungalow," said Uncle Wiggily.

And when the rabbit gentleman reached home he saw his muskrat lady housekeeper out on the porch, sitting in a kitchen chair.

"Do you know, Wiggy," spoke Nurse Jane, "there is just one thing our porch needs, and that is a rocking chair. I'd love to sit out here in a rocking chair, but I don't like to bring out my good one from the parlor."

"Then I shall make you a porch rocker," offered the rabbit.

"How?", asked Nurse Jane.

"I'll fasten these two curved pieces of wood that were too heavy for Indian bows to the legs of the kitchen chair," explained Mr. Longears. "In that way I'll make a rocker and you shall sit on the porch and rock and sew."

"Oh, fine!" laughed Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy.

So Uncle Wiggily made some holes in the curved pieces of wood, and in the holes he fitted the four legs of the kitchen chair. He fastened the legs in the holes with sticky gum, like glue, from the pine tree.

"Now I shall try the new rocker and, if it is all right, you may use it," said Uncle Wiggily to Nurse Jane. The rabbit gentleman sat in the rocking chair he had made and was going to swing back, when, all of a sudden, along came the Skillery Scallery Alligator with the double-jointed tail.

"I'll sit here and wait for you."

"I want ears to nibble! I want ears!" bellowed the 'Gator.

"Well, before you nibble mine, would you please let me try this rocker for Nurse Jane?" asked the bunny.

"Yes, I suppose so," growled the Alligator. "I'll sit here on the porch and wait for you." So he sat down, spreading out his tail behind him. Then Uncle Wiggily began to rock. He rocked and he rocked, faster and faster, and, all of a sudden, the bunny gentleman hitched the chair over to one side and he rocked squarely on the Alligator's tail.

"Oh, wow! Oh, wowzie! Oh, zippie!" howled the bad chap. "You've broken my double-jointed tail!" And down off the porch he flopped himself, and away he ran, not nibbling the bunny's ears at all.

"There, Nurse Jane," laughed the rabbit. "I think your rocker is all right to use," and Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy had a grand time in it.

So this teaches us that it is a good thing, sometimes, to play Indian, and if Robin Redbreast doesn't wear a blue vest when he plays golf and make a foozle, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and his leaky roof.

Billy Whiskers

by FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY

"The thought of being tied up made me wild," said Stubby, "for I had visions of a still little dog house set in the broiling sun, with rotten old straw in it full of fleas. Never this! I would wriggle myself out of the maid's arms and escape before she got me there.

"Just as I had made up my mind to do this and had given the first wriggle, she opened a door at one side of the long hall we had been traversing, and with an extra hard slap, she dropped me on the floor, and I found myself in a large, marble-tiled bathroom.

"'So, ho!' I thought, 'I am to have a bath, be made clean, and carried back to my mistress. Not so bad! I'll let her bathe me without making a fuss about it if she doesn't get soap in my eyes, but if she does, I will splash her and soak her from head to foot.'

"She turned the water on in the tub and then left the room, and when she came back she had towels, soap, a brush and comb, and also a bottle of toilet water, and a three-inch ribbon a yard long hanging over her arm.

"The minute I spied these things, I knew she was going to perfume my hair and tie that hateful ribbon around my neck, and make me look like a regular lady's lap dog, the thing I despise most on earth.

"I, a lap dog, who have fought in the Japanese army, and crossed the plains of North America on foot and in an aeroplane! And now to be turned into a little, stupid lap dog! 'Why, my dear lady,' I thought, 'I know more of the world than you ever could know, shut up in your castle and doomed never to see anything else, but always to be tagged around with father, brother, husband or servant! The only way to see the world and know it is to travel around by yourself.'

"Here my soliloquy was cut short by the maid dropping me into the tub. I tried hard to get out and howled with pain as the water was nearly boiling hot. Thank goodness, she burnt her fingers when she dropped me in, which made her turn on the cold water so quickly that she nearly froze me in turn, as I was directly under the spigot.

"And from that minute my troubles began. She would pick me up by the middle of my back and nearly pull my hair out by the roots. Then she would almost suffocate me by grabbing my head and sticking it under the water. This was notenough, but she must dab a spongeful of soapy water in my face. At last I could stand her treatment no longer, and I snapped at her arm and bit it just a little. I felt like taking a good bite out of it, though. She screamed and made such a fuss you wuold have thought I had bitten her had enough to draw blood. Her screams brought one of the servants—a boy about 17—to the door to see what was the trouble.

On the Spur of the Moment

THE TRAIN SHAVE

Somewhere in Pennsylvania
I began to look like a Holy Roller
And I asked the car porter if
There was a barber on the train.
He said sadly that there was,
But did not advise me to try him.
The porter didn't want to lose
The prospect of a good tip.
The chair in the train shop
Was strongly reminiscent of one
That they have up in Sing Sing,
Only there were no straps.
But a man can't fall out if the
Barber holds him in with his elbow.
The road was rough and the train
Seemed undecided what route to take.
The engineer was steering badly.
The mirror was badly cracked.
"Customer did that with his head,"
Said the barber. "Train stopped quick."
The train lurched and the lather brush
Parked itself in our mouth and again
It nestled down under our collar.
Then he began to shave me.
"Ever cut a customer?" I asked.
"Not yet," he said. "No, not yet.
I just started this morning and
You are the first man I ever shaved
On a train. I am just substituting
For the regular barber. He's sick.
I'll try not to cut you very bad."
"Once over is enough," I gasped.
After eight years the job was done.
"Fifty cents," snapped the barber.
It was worth $50 to get back to life.
The next time they will grow.

Scientists have found a petrified man thousands of years old. Probably he did business with one of the ancient bootleggers.

Ladd Plumley in "Field and Stream" declares that strong smelling cheese, like Limburger, would attract catfish when other baits were not alluring. Plumley asserts that fish have nostrils, and the sense of smell in fish is important for every fisherman, not only for the bait fisherman but for the fly fisherman. While it is conceded that Limburger has not the sweet fragrance of milady's sachet, still the enthusiastic angler knows that all the poor fish are not in ballrooms.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Jim Smith was notoriously slow pay. He owed quite a bill at the grocery for pork. One day, as his credit was becoming strained, he walked calmly into the grocery and said, "Mr. Black, I want to pay you for the pork I have had, and want some more."

"Certainly," said the delighted proprietor, as he hastened to wait on his customer.

Taking the package of pork, Jim Smith started to go.

"Wait a minute," said the proprietor. "I thought you wanted to pay for the pork?"

"I do," remarked Jim, as he resumed his homeward way, "but I can't!"

Poems That Live

TO MY MOTHER

Because I feel that, in the Heavens above,
The angels, whispering to one another,
Can find, among their burning terms of love,
None so devotional as that of Mother;
Therefore by that dear name I long have called you,
You who are more than mother unto me,
And fill my heart of hearts, where death installed you,
In setting my Virginia's spirit free.
My mother—my own mother, who died early,
Was but the mother of myself; but you
Are mother to the one I loved so dearly,
And thus are dearer than the mother I knew.
By that affinity with which my wife
Was dearer to my soul than its soul life.

—Edgar Allan Poe.

To the Evening Star

Star that bringest home the bee,
And sett'st the weary labourer free!
If any star shed peace, 'tis thou
That sends't it from above,
Appearing when heaven's breath and brow
Are sweet as hers we love.

Come to the luxuriant skies,
While the landscape's odours rise,
Whilst far-off lowing herds are heard
And songs when toil is done,
From cottages whose smoke unstirr'd
Curls yellow in the sun.

Star of love's soft interview,
Parted lovers on thee muse;
Their remembrancer in heaven
Of thrilling vows thou art,
Too delicious to be riven
By absence from the heart.

—Thomas Campbell.

Heart and Home — Health and Happiness

Everyone in town knew Cap Abel, but it is doubtful if any, even those who set off the blast on the morning of the Fourth, knew what that noise meant to his soul and his happiness. The captain was a bit queer, men said, a fine old fellow who could not become accustomed to retirement. Now that he is gone there are many memories.

He was Captain Abel Pond once, orator upon all of the formal occasions and leader in civic activities. An imposing man with his Civil War hat and erect carriage, he was a soldier with a soldier's gruff voice.

Every Fourth of July Captain Pond read the Declaration of Independence in the town square, where the men and women sat on the benches to listen. To them all it was an occasion to be remembered, for the old man put spirit into the reading. Even the children were not sorry to quit their celebrating for the few minutes.

The shelving of the captain was gradual. With the advent of automobiles and city ways the meetings on the square dwindled. The older men complained of the picnic and ball games which robbed the holiday of its significance, and Captain Pond, looking upon a bare dozen who had met to hear him read the Declaration, vowed he would never do it again.

After that he did not leave his home often. There were those who said he still read with all of his old eloquence and that he read alone. Captain Pond's house was on a low hill in the outskirts, off the beaten way. As he grew older, when new people came into the town, and the boom followed, there were few who gave the old man a thought. He was feeble now, and the moustache which had been black and fiercely militaristic was gray and drooping.

When the morning of the Fourth came there were at least two plans for a secret celebration. One was held by a group of boys who had planted a heavy blast of powder in the quarry not far from Captain Pond's house, a charge which would awaken the town and announce the holiday. The other was that of the captain.

Just before dawn an alarm clock rang and the old man, fully clothed, rose from his bed. He pulled his military hat over his brow, shouldered his army musket and marched out upon his hill to greet the sun and the Fourth.

There was no need of a manuscript, he knew his Declaration by heart. Captain Pond felt this was going to be his last chance and he was strangely excited. With a feeling he was leading a company, he walked proudly to the rim of the hill and, as the light spread above the horizon, spoke to no one at all—or to the whole country—the words of the nation's freedom. An old man with bared head, his face lighted by the rising sun and the feelings within him, came to the end of the words, picked up his musket and looked down at the town.

"This may be my last salute," he said, "let it speak to every one of you!" He would wake them up—they needed it.

"I charged her good," he shouldered the musket. "It ought to be loud enough so some will hear."

Captain Pond pulled the trigger and the earth shook. The boom which came with the musket's voice rattled panes, frightened women and brought men running to the streets. To the old man it was rare music, an answer to his prayers.

"I said I'd do it!" he repeated over and over as he marched back to his house. "I said I'd wake them up!"

And the boys who had set off the blast saw him enter his doorway.

"See, he's smiling," one said. "I told you we wouldn't scare him. I think it sort of pleased the old fellow."

MODELS FOR COTTON CREPE

There are many ways of using the beautiful cotton crepes found in such an abundance this season, but none more effective than in these two models. Although it is not illustrated, the frock to the left has a sleeveless jacket with open front, which may be fashioned in contrasting color and fabric, if desired. The sash is of soft satin. Medium size requires three and one-half yards of thirty-six-inch material.

The neckpiece of blue fox is one of the sensations of summer and every woman of style either has one or is planning to get one to wear with thin frocks. Pharoah blue voile trimmed with blue ribbon in a darker shade makes up the dress to the right and the simplicity of the model is so irresistible that it is sure to be a universal favorite. Medium size requires four and three-eighths yards of thirty-six-inch voile.

First Model: Pictorial Review Dress No. 1558. Sizes, fourteen to twenty years. Price 35 cents.

Second Model: Dress No. 1568. Sizes, fourteen to twenty years. Price, 35 cents.

Beauty Chats

THE BEAUTIFYING BATH

Luxury is cheaply purchased when it takes the form of a beautifying bath. I can't think of any other part of milady's toilet that can cost more, or that need cost less. Scented bath crystals and fancy bags of herbs have the most extraordinary prices in some shops—yet you can duplicate everything at home with little trouble and almost no expense.

Do you live in the country? If so, you can grow herbs for the bath—the pungent, sweet-smelling kind are pleasantest to use. Rosemary is delightful and so is lavendar. Some people like thyme, and one reader told me that she gathered and dried mint from the garden, made tiny bags and used this in the bath.

Used this way, none of these things are beautifying. But toilet vinegars, that is, bath vinegars, added to the water are beautifying because they are astingent and stimulating. You can take plain colorless vinegar, which is cheap enough to buy in quantity, add herbs to it to give it a nice odor, and use this in the bath. Parsley, by the way, is very bleaching. If you don't mind its odor, a small bagful, crushed into the hot water of the bath, will benefit your skin.

If you want a real sea salt bath, and can't buy the bags of sea salt, buy the following: Sulphate of potassium; half a drachm; sulphate of sodium, one and a half ounces; sulphate of magnesim, one ounce; chloride of magnesium, three drachms; chloride of calcium, one ounce; chloride of sodium, half a pound. Sounds complicated, doesn't it, but it isn't. This is enough for two baths and it's cleansing, stimulating and healing to tender spots on the skin.

Oatmeal in muslin bags, squeezed into the water, is very good too.

Bobby E.: Cocoa butter can be bought by the cake at any drug stores. Warm slightly before rubbing the cake over the palm of the hand that you intend using for massaging portions of the body you desire to fatten. Massage until the skin has taken up as much of the oil as it will absorb, and repeat the treatment every night as long as required.

Trix: I shall be glad to mail directions for reduction on receipt of a stamped self-addressed envelope. All depilatories destroy the hair, but since the directions warn you to remove the preparations as soon as they make the skin smart, there should be no danger to the skin in using them. Anything that would bleach the skin instantly would be risky to use.

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young girl nineteen years old and am in love with a boy five years my senior. He is of one religion and I am of another. I met him about three months ago and unless I see him every day I almost go wild.

My father is dead and my mother has been married the second time for about two and a half years. After I met this boy he asked me to go out with him almost every night, and he still asks me. I hate to refuse him because I truly love him, but my mother has threatened me if she sees him around the door. All this is because he is of a different religion.

I will not be content without him. What would you advise me to do? BLUE EYES.

There are certain problems which are so personal that advice means nothing. I cannot decide for you whether you would be happier to forget the young man or to keep him as a friend. If you really love the young man your different religious views will not seriously interfere with your happiness. You are still a youg girl and it would be advisable to wait a couple of years before marrying.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been corresponding with a boy who is going to have a birthday party soon. My mother and his mother are very good friends and so she informed us that my parents and I were going to receive an invitation. Would it be proper for my parents or me to give him anything? If so, would you please give me some suggestions as to what we should give? Would hand-made handkerchiefs be all right for me to give? SUE.

Yes, it would be all right for you and your parents to give the boy presents. You might give him something altogether, or if you prefer, give him the handkerchiefs yourself and let your parents give him a book. I would not advise that you give more than two or three handkerchiefs. If you decide to give him something together you might present him with book ends, cuff links, or gentleman's stationery of excellent quality.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been going with a fellow for eight months and thought I loved him until about a month ago. At that time I met another fellow and now I don't care much about the one I had gone with so long, but I do love the one I have known so short a time. I think he loves me from his actions, and he also says he loves me. But my parents do not want me to go with him. They want me to go with the other fellow and I don't want to.

I am only eighteen years old. What should I do? Should I do as my folks say or go with the one I love against their will?

BLUE EYES.

You will have to let your own good judgment settle your problem. No one knows better than you do the character of the young man you now love. You know whether or not he can be trusted, or whether he does and says things which are not right. I am inclined to think something is wrong with him since his love has grown mature in such a short time. Usually the right kind of young man is more cautious before he declares his love. I am afraid you have fallen in love with some one who lets his feelings run riot. He loves a girl, and, without waiting to be sure his love is deep and not merely infatuation, he makes violent love until he tires of her and turns to some one else.

Judge for yourself, my dear. If you distrust the young man at all, give him up now because he will not make you happy.

It is surprising how much we housekeepers can get along without, in the way of clothing, if we are economically inclined.

The business woman, or the woman who lives in a hotel or boarding house, is exposed to the eyes of a critical world and must therefore dress well. She must have new garments if she is to appear neat, well-groomed and up to date.

But the woman who spends the greater part of the day in the shelter of her own home can wear old clothes—and sometimes make the old clothes do in place of new ones. She is not open to critical observation.

I know of one little bride housekeeper who appreciates this fact. "I was a business girl before I married," she told me, "and all my salary—that is, all that was left after I paid my board—went into new clothes. My very job depended on my looking right. But now that I can stay at home all day, I just revel in wearing old clothes. I hadn't a very elaborate trousseau—but I didn't need one. It's a regular game, trying to see how long I can go without buying anything new."

Then I knew of a mother housekeeper who had not bought a new dress in two years! "It's marvelous, the way I slip through one season after another without getting the clothes I need," she told me with a laugh. "Sometimes it's hard. Once or twice I've had to refuse a party invitation because I simply hadn't a thing to wear. But the main thing is to keep on adding to our savings bank account for our children's sake. They will need special training later on in their education, and then we'll have the money for it."

These courageous women have, of course, learned to "make over" their old garments cleverly. This year they have been turning their old cuff sleeves into cuffless, narrow "bell" sleeves, and have been letting down hems to make their skirts longer. And, as far as I can see, they are as neat and pretty looking as anybody else. In fact, I often think they are prettier than any other two women I know, because their faces are alight with a glow of satisfaction which comes from doing what is right. They have joined the great army of the self-sacrificing, and in return they have gained the beauty which illumines the faces of the self-sacrificing.

ON DOCTORS AND NURSES

Why is there such a shortage of women entering the nursing profession?

I heard a doctor complaining bitterly of that the other day.

"There was a time," he said, "when we could pick and choose and insist on good material, but now we have to take about what we can get. Instead of having more applicants than we have room for, we haven't enough to fill up the training schools. I don't know what's the matter with the women."

I didn't attempt to enlighten him, although I have a suggestion to offer.

I suspect that the matter isn't with the women at all. It's with the times, plus the man—in other words, the doctors.

While taking my recent course in hospital life about which I have written you previously, I frequently went through one experience which always made my blood boil.

Is This Necessary?

I had a very fine nurse, the salt of the earth, deft, efficient, conscientious. Whenever the doctor—himself more of the salt of the earth—would come in to do a dressing she would wait upon him with the utmost expediency. And yet his whole manner to her would be as brusque, and disagreeable, and impatient as if she were clumsy and inattentive.

It made my blood boil just to witness it. If I had to endure it I think my blood would not only have boiled, but boiled over.

But when I commented to her on it and asked her if he had some special grudge against her, she said: "Oh, no, that's the way they always are. They have to be that way to keep discipline."

Another nurse, a well-born, well-educated woman, the type of whom there is crying need in the nursing profession, has this to say in a letter regarding her experiences:

When the Doctor Swears

"There seems to be one place where a doctor forgets that he is a gentleman, and that is in the operating room. Just why it is necessary to curse and shout like a madman when everyone is getting about as fast as they can has always been a puzzle to me. But things never do go fast enough to suit the surgeon and he will swear at everyone. I have only seen one doctor operate who did not find it necessary to swear. And while it was not easy in the operating room with him it was so much pleasanter to be with him that we all heaved a great sigh of relief when he came in."

Now perhape I underestimate the need of discipline. I know that you must have discipline in the hospital and that this means firmness and even sternness. But it would take a great deal to convince me that to keep discipline you have to jump on people when they are doing things as well as they can be done. It seems to me that that unreasonable way of acting would create a nervous tension which would result in slackening the service instead of speeding it up.

When I said that the shortage of nurses was due to the times I meant this: In the old days there were very few professions into which women could go. Now there are innumerable careers for the woman with brains.

Nursing is hard work at best. The training is long and arduous, the good nurse can have little personal life outside her work, and if in addition to that she has to be sworn at when she is doing all that a human being can do, small wonder she discourages other women from entering on such a career.

I think doctors are wonderful men. But, like the rest of us, not quite perfect. And it does seem to me that they might consider a slight modification of this discipline tradition if they want to get the best kind of women as nurses.

SPIRITUALITY VS MATERIALITY

THE GLORIUOS FOURTH

"Public opinion is arranging its present intolerable method of celebrating the Fourth of July, whereby so many people—mostly bright, active children—are condemned to an agonizing death from lockjaw or to be killed outright, and whereby thousands annually are rendered blind, lose legs, arms or hands, or are otherwise maimed for life.

"That public opinion will eventually force the lessening or prevention of this annual carnage is evidenced by the fact that each year more cities are adopting ordinances to restrict the sale of firearms. Last year Cleveland had a record of twelve persons killed and ninety injured. This so aroused the people that the City Council has passed an ordinance prohibiting the use of firearms in celebration of the Fourth. We understand the manufacturers of firearms are trying to secure the repeal of the ordinance."

I quote these paragraphs from the Journal of the American Medical Association of September, 1908, just to remind you that we are advancing. The "annual carnage" which used to be the aftermath of the senseless and barbaric way we once expressed our spirit of independence is practically abolished. The manufacturers of firearms and explosives, if they tried, did not succeed in repealing these ordinances prohibiting the sale of their products. However, even with the simpler forms of celebration, we do have some accidents, and today I will take up briefly a few of the first-aid treatments for them.

Remove all portions of the wad. Leave the wound open, and, if necessary, have it opened further by a physician so the oxygen of the air (in which the lockjaw bacillus will not grow) will reach it. The anti-tetanic (lockjaw) serum should be given at once. When the anti-tetanic serum is given, there need be no fear of death from lockjaw.

All children should be taught if the clothes catch fire to wrap something around the victim as tightly as possible. For a burn, a gauze saturated with equal parts of linseed oil and lime water, or a thick application of some mild antiseptic ointment such as unguentine or boric ointment. Call a physician if the burn is severe and painful, because severe burns are dangerous.

Cuts and Wounds

First remove all particles of dirt that can be removed. Clean with boiled water or full strength peroxide of hydrogen. Paint over with half iodine and alcohol and put a sterile piece of gauze over the wound until a physician can be seen, if the cut or wound is of any size.

Apply pressure directly to the bleeding point over a clean handkerchief or a piece of gauze if you have it. If you haven't, use the hand—for if the hemorrhage is serious, it is better to stand the risk of infection than the risk of bleeding too seriously. Tie a bandage above the part first, and then, if that does not stop the bleeding, below the part. If it is a leg that is wounded, pressing the calf upon the thigh or the thigh on the abdomen may stop the bleeding. If it is the arm, bending the elbow tight may stop it.

An old actor was wont to claim that he had worked with Booth and Barrett, says the Milwaukee Sentinel. When questioned about his parts he would always answer, "I did hoofbeats," and then add, "the drama has gone to pot."

"Why so?" some of the younger generation would indignantly inquire.

"Anyone can do the honks nowadays," was the sad reply.

DINNER STORIES

The hotel porter had just seen to the depositing of the Scotsman's luggage in the van and walked up to the carriage door with expectations of a tip, says the Edinburgh Scotsman.

"Luggage in safely, sir," he said. "'Ope you'll 'ave a comfortable journey."

"Varra sorry, laddie," said the Scotsman, "but I've given ma sma' change to the chamber maid."

"She told me you didn't give her anything," answered the porter.

"Aweel," retorted Sandy, "if I didna gie yon bonnie lass onything, what sort of a chance d'ye think you've got?"

It is the custom of a certain western magistrate, after having passed sentence upon the culprits convicted in his court, to give them more or less wise advice, says Harper's.

On one occasion, having before him a person convicted of theft, he started thus:

"If you want to succeed in this world you must keep straight. Now, do you understand?"

"Well, not quite," replied the prisoner, "but if your honor will kindly tell me how a man is to keep straight when he is trying to make both ends meet, I might."

Marshal Foch told the following anecdote while in this country:

A French mayor who at one time held the office of magistrate was about to perform the civil rite of marriage.

"Mlle. X," he said, "do you agree to take this man for your wedded husband."

After the woman had replied in the affirmative, the mayor, turning to the bridegroom, delivered himself as follows:

"Prisoner at the bar, what have you to say in your defense?"—Los Angeles Times.

BURBANK

12,000 FEET OF NEW WATER MAINS

Installation of Utilities in June Set Record, Report Declares

The greatest month of water and light installations in the history of Burbank was reported last night to the city trustees by the local public utilities department, it being shown that during the month of June 12,000 additional feet of water mains were installed and seventy electric meters were connected.

The trustees received this report with enthusiasm, particularly the portion that stated the work of installing water mains was completed on the following streets: Pioneer, Lamer, Pass, Rose Valley, Evergreen, Lomita, Shelton and Mariposa.

Next month, City Engineer Miller reported, it is planned to connect for water in the Olive avenue section, where several new subdivisions have recently been opened up.

Mayor J. C. Crawford and the trustees have been investigating various roadway materials, particularly one comprising asphalt mixed with clay, said to form a very durable substance.

Inasmuch as two new main arteries of traffic throughout the valley are to bisect Burbank, the trustees are particularly interested in obtaining the best roadway materials possible for their construction.

Road Projects

The right-of-way for the proposed Riverside boulevard has been obtained clear to the city limits of Burbank, it is reported and plans are now under way for securing a right-of-way for this boulevard through Burbank itself.

The proposal is to have this a 100-foot highway connecting up with Pioneer, Buena Vista and Main streets, thus uniting the main built-up sections of the city with a beautiful boulevard along the Los Angeles river to Los Angeles.

Another road project receiving much attention of Mayor Crawford and City Engineer Miller is the plan to extend Fourth street through Burbank and thence through Glendale to Eagle Rock and Pasadena, making still another outlet for Burbank traffic, and affording a much-needed short-cut south.

Efforts to establish a direct boulevard from Van Nuys to Burbank, as an extension of Van Oven street, Van Nuys, have been carried successfully to the Burbank city limits, and no serious objections have yet been met, it is understood.

This road will follow the course of one already laid out, connecting with the road that passes the Empire China factory, touching San Fernando boulevard at that point.

Electon Called

The city trustees announce an election for Tuesday, August 2, to vote on the matter of annexation of thirty-five acres on Magnolia avenue, adjoining the southwestern city limits.

The petition requesting annexation was signed by Mr. and Mrs. James E. Normandy, Mrs. Rose Usselman and Mr. and Mrs. Gustave A. Carlson. City Clerk Webster states that there are seven legal voters within the territory in question, five of whom signed the petition.

The city trustees have tabled the cemetery proposition by a vote of 3 to 1, and the Valhalla Memorial Park company are permitted to continue their operations for establishing a cemetery in the southwestern part of the city.

It is the opinion of lawyers that an injunction is the only thing that can now stop the development of the property in question.

NEWS NOW GOES LIKE A FLASH

In Revolutionary Days It Was Dispatched by Carrier on Horse

ing information regarding the French fleet. Lafayette wanted to attack the enemy, but Washington deemed such a movement premature.

Washington finally effected a junction with the forces of Lafayette, making an army of 16,000 men, while Cornwallis had about 7,500 bottled up on the peninsula, his only hope being from the assistance which might come to him from the British navy. Vigorously pressing the siege, Washington secured from Cornwallis overtures for a surrender on October 17, and articles of surrender were finally agreed upon. The artillery, guns, accountrements and public stores of every description were to be delivered to the victors, the officers to retain their sidearms and the soldiers to keep their private property of every kind.

Enemy March Out

Promptly at noon on the day agreed upon for surrender, October 19, the gates of the fort were opened and a detachment of American infantry and French grenadiers entered and took possession. Two hours later, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, the enemy marched out, with colors furled, to the tune of "The World Is Upside Down."

Washington dispatched with all haste his trusted adjutant, Col. Tench Tilghman, to Philadelphia, where the Continental congress was sitting. The young soldier took the long trip on horseback. Riding practically night and day, he reached the Quaker city at midnight on October 23, four days after the surrender. After finding his way with all haste to the home of Thomas McKean, the president of congress, he rapped so violently the door knocker that one of the night watch several blocks away hurried over to learn the cause of the disturbance.

Soon the news was being proclaimed throughout the city. The cry was taken up, not only by the watch, but hundreds of citizens, rushing half dressed from their beds into the street. The bellman of the old statehouse was hurried out from his home to announce the tidings; lights were seen moving in every house; the people were astir as they had not been before since the day the Declaration of Independence had been promulgated five years before. The city was wild with joy. Soon the canon were booming.

Express Thanks

Dispatch riders were sent out in every direction, heralds of a new era, the dawn of a democracy, whose influence was eventually to permeate every path of the earth. Congress voted thanks of the nation and appropriate honors to Washington, Lafayette, Rochambeau, De Grasse, and a day was appointed for general thanksgiving and prayer throughout the Union, for God's great favors to the struggling patriots. Legislative bodies, executive councils, private societies, churches and other organizations overwhelmed General Washington with congratulatory addresses; bonfires were kindled on the mountain peaks.

There you have the story, folks, of the first real Fourth of July, celebrated actually on October 24, 1781, five years after the Liberty bell had first rung out the battle cry of freedom following the signing of the Declaration of nIdependence, July 4, 1776.

EAGLE ROCK

CIVIC QUESTIONS ARE DISCUSSED

Chamber of Commerce at Eagle Rock Has First "Open Forum"

The "open forum" meeting of the Eagle Rock Chamber of Commerce, held 8 o'clock last night, at the City Hall, was well attended and gave the chamber its official send-off.

Support was unqualifiedly pledged and an enjoyable, instructive and inspiring time had by all present, many subjects of vital import being brought up and discussed, among them the Grammar school and High school problems, the matter of changing street names, improvements of roads and highways, the Dahlia show coming in October, the water supply situation and other matters of equal importance.

Regarding water supply it was brought out that there need be no "water famine" if none of this precious fluid is wasted. New 10-inch mains have been installed by order of the Los Angeles water works officials, it was disclosed, and lack of reservoir facilities is the real problem. Citizens were urged to use no more water than required for ordinary purposes.

New Thoroughfares

It was brought out that the Regional Planning commission have under consideration a comprehensive plan for through thoroughfares for all San Fernando valley points. Their hope is to have for every mile a 90-foot roadway, every half-mile one at least 80 feet wide and every quarter-mile a 60-foot road. This applies to north, south, east and west.

Although the plans of the commission pertain largely to the future, it is felt that steps must be taken now if this goal is ever to be achieved, a goal that in the opinion of many should have been set fifteen years ago, when at the present time vast additional territory still closed to trade might have been opened up.

Should individual property owners and realty men back these plans, the result will be greatly increased development in the next decade, it is said.

There are also plans under way to cut through Avenue 50 to connect with South Townsend avenue, making a thorough street to Pasadena avenue and a short-cut to the business center of Los Angeles of at least ten minutes.

Commenting on the result of last night's open forum meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, President O. J. Root states that with active support such as was pledged, and with the acknowledged boosting membership of the new body, plans of great scope and vast potential value to the community can unquestionably be carried to successful fruition.

"We are now united for action," Mr. Root stated, "and action will unquestionably follow. I look for an unprecedented development of this section in the next year or two."

BANG GO THE PRICES

—Every yard of goods, every sock, every shirt, every shoe—EVERYTHING in the house offered for the next nine days at prices that are SENSATIONAL! A backward season, heavy overstocks, lack of room for the big new lines that are rolling into the store—all of these compel us to FORCE THE SELLING INSTANTLY! Not by halfway measures with a penny nibbled off here and a nickel cut off there, but by smashing prices to such low levels that thrifty people will buy because the dollar will go farther in THIS SALE than it will probably ever go again. THIS IS GLENDALE'S OLDEST DRY GOODS STORE. THIS IS McGEE'S MOST SUPREME EFFORT TO MOVE MERCHANDISE! READ! COME!
